Firestone & Radium

The rapidly increasing pace of scientific development provides a clear pathway for the re-emergence of hidden and suppressed ancient knowledge. Historical accounts of a major treasure deposit of European origin dating back to the 15th century below Oak Island, off Nova Scotia, Canada, are strongly supported by the presence of a small grove of tall, red oak trees on the island not found elsewhere in the area. Hewn wood samples recovered from excavations at the site have also been RC¹⁴ dated to the same period.

Historical records concerning the appearance of luminous spheres moving through and above the forests of the island has drawn attention to the site throughout prior centuries, contributing to a growing awareness among generations of determined investigators who have dedicated significant lifelong efforts to finally uncovering the buried mystery. This work still continues today, having expanded to include a mainstream cover-up TV series presently running for its 9th field season, ominously entitled 'The Curse of Oak Island'.

Oak Island deposit site
Nova Scotia, Canada

Surface prospecting, borehole drilling and archeological excavations by the Oak Island research group of Craig Tester and Rick and Marty Lagina have revealed an extended horizon of European activity on the island that traces back to medieval times. Metal detecting the island's beaches uncovered a small lead cross that was traced through isotopic ratio analysis to a 10th century origin in southern France (S5, E10).

While accurate scientific methodology is applied to expose the origin of European artifacts recovered, many viewers recognize a great deal of airtime is expended redirecting the viewer's attention to a preconceived set of erroneous assumptions that ultimately disregard finds pertaining to artificial stonework of the Atlantean high civilization. Instead, the stones are totally ignored by actors wearing Satanic Skull & Bones apparel.

Maximum attention has been vectored to pre-1700s European treasure deposits identified at 75-100' depths below Oak Island, despite continual indications from magnetometry and conductivity scanning of bedrock layers underlying the entire Oak Island swamp contain high levels of gold and other exotic metal particles. Limestone samples from these strata reveal an extraordinary succession of activity periods at the ancient site leading back to ~30,000bp, linking together several past life experiences of this author that deserve retelling.

Extensive borehole drilling operations have been undertaken in the immediate area of the Oak Island treasure deposit (above). Elevated levels of mercury have been detected throughout the debris field area, suggesting a significant drift of materials due to the collapse of an extensive system of 16th-17th century tunnels that had been reinforced by hewn oak timbers grown onsite over generations of continual activity.

Parchment fragment
Oak Island, Canada

Ground surface scanning by metal detectors on Oak Island have turned up many significant finds, including garnet-inset broaches matching known jeweled designs of Freemason aprons and other regalia, and a coin inscribed 'Carolvs · II · CAROLO · 1673' for King Charles II (above, left). RC¹⁴ dating of in situ wood samples revealed covert treasure deposit operations dating to the reigns of Queen Elizabeth I and King James I.

A tiny fragment of very old parchment paper measuring just $\frac{5}{16}$ " was recovered from the spoils pile after drilling on the eastern side of the island (above, right). The measurable mercury toxicity of these fragments indicates a link with special scientific processes developed by Francis Bacon for the preservation of valued documents by submersion in mercury, thereby preventing contact with atmospheric moisture and oxygen:

Francis Bacon was always accepted as the younger son of Sir Nicholas Bacon however there exist reasonable grounds to suggest that he was actually the secret son of... Robert Dudley. He is an enigmatic figure and some actually believe he is the true author of the works of Shakespeare and Christopher Marlowe.

Bacon held a fascination with mysterious codes and ciphers, which could link him to the enigmatic inscribed stone discovered in the Money Pit. In fact, a Dr. Orville Ward Owen, a follower of Bacon's ciphers followed instructions in a Baconian cipher and discovered a mysterious underground chamber beneath the bed of the River Wye, in the West of Britain. Although it was disappointingly empty, further Baconian ciphers were to be found carved on the walls...

In the opinion of Dr Owen, Bacon had always intended to conceal his manuscripts below the Wye. This was in the tradition of the ancient Visigoths who redirected rivers and buried their dead beneath in secret tombs. Issues of plagiarism were particularly of issue at this time, with censorship developing into a heated area of debate.

Sir Francis Bacon, 1618
Alchemist of King Charles I

Could it be that Bacon, feared that his secret might be discovered had had second thoughts, deciding that the River Wye location was not secure enough? To link Bacon with Canada, in 1610, King James I granted Bacon land in Newfoundland. Sir Francis Bacon was familiar with the science of preserving manuscripts in mercury. This coupled with his fascination in secret chambers points directly to the Money Pit. The finding of ancient flasks containing mercury plus the recovery of a piece of mysterious parchment allows the theory to become more credible.

It is certainly possible that Bacon had the contacts and status to arrange a secret burial of his valuable manuscripts in a preservative mercury bath. By making use of much older techniques, present at the Money Pit, Bacon was just adding to the mystery lying beneath Oak Island. He was connected with Shugborough Hall in England, the site of a strange inscription referring to Arcadian treasure. This same treasure is linked to Rennes le Chateau in France and the Knights Templar.

Surely, with his contemporaries familiar with the mysterious disappearance of the fabled Arcadian treasure from France and the possibility that Sir Francis Drake could have informed Bacon about Oak Island, this connection is worth consideration. Had the Arcadian treasure made it to Oak Island through the Knights Templars' journey to Canada, the location would be an ideal place to hide further valuable items, especially if Bacon himself was a follower, fueling his interest in ciphers, a typical trait of the Masons.¹

The dramatic works of 'William Shakespeare' have been accurately attributed to Francis Bacon, suggesting the playwright's manuscripts were buried at Oak Island during the founding of Nova Scotia by King James I:

An enterprising Scot, Sir William Alexander of Menstrie who was made a Knight in 1609, attracted the attention of King James, who held court regularly at nearby Stirling, when he proposed that it might encourage development of a New Scotland if His Majesty were to offer a new order of baronets.

At Windsor Castle on September 10, 1621 King James signed a grant in favour of Sir William Alexander covering all of the lands 'between our Colonies of New England and Newfoundland, to be known as New Scotland' (Nova Scotia in Latin), an area larger than Great Britain and France combined. On October 18, 1624 the King announced his intention of creating a new order of baronets to Scottish 'knights and gentlemen of cheife respect for the birth, place, or fortuness', James I died on March 27, 1625 but his heir, Charles I, lost no time in implementing his father's plan. By the end of 1625 the first 22 Baronets of Nova Scotia were created and, as inducements to settlement of his new colony of Nova Scotia, Sir William offered tracts of land totaling 11,520 acres...²

In 1658, King Charles II gave personal instructions to Sir William Phips to make the deposits, with the aid of Captain Andrew Belcher of Boston, Massachusetts. Phips was salvaging the wreck of the Concepción, a Spanish galleon that had been sunk in severe weather years prior, off the Caicos Islands in the Caribbean.

King James I

After his second salvage operation in 1687, Phips returned to England after a full 8 months at sea with only $\frac{1}{20}$ the load of recovered treasure that he had on the first salvage operation, leading many to suggest he deposited salvaged Spanish silver on Oak Island before crossing the Atlantic. A 1688 letter reports the ship of William Belcher (spelled Bellsharr) was caught with one of the ships of Sir William Phips in the Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia area. The letter states they burnt the ship at Port-le-bare, Nova Scotia.³

Investigation of Oak Island with metal detectors uncovered an English-style adze likely dating to between 1620-1740, directly implicating significant oak cribbing construction for treasure deposition activity by King Charles Stuart I. English ox shoes were also recovered, along with musket balls and bell metals used in making canons, and an English pine tar kiln for sealing ship hulls dating to the 1500s.

RC¹⁴ dating of a thick root found below a cobble stone road excavated beneath the southern edge of the Oak Island swamp yielded a range of 1474-1638 AD, implicating use of an off-loading ramp for treasure deposition at the site. This activity was initiated by King James VI of Scotland before claiming the throne of England as King James I (at left).

A white bronze button with residual gold plating was recovered from borehole GAL-1 at the deposition site, providing another clear association with the advanced scientific use of exotic elements for a surprising variety of purposes. This much can be ascertained by the striking presence of osmium in the white bronze alloy, comprised of predominantly copper, tin and zinc (XRF spectroscopy data below, from S9, E6):

The most unusual artifacts excavated thus far at Oak Island were retrieved by borehole drilling teams working near the original deposition site. Small fragments of iron appeared to be coated in some type of cement-like material containing traces of gold particles distributed throughout the limestone-like matrix. XRF scans also revealed relatively high levels of osmium particles in the cladding (S9, E3-4, opposite).

Records from previous searcher excavations of the treasure deposit area described a vertical shaft with log platforms every 10' descending for over 100', with adjoining networks of tunnels. Borehole drilling operations conducted at the Oak Island treasure deposition site extracted metal fragments with limestone cladding at 75-90', with oak beam samples from collapsed tunnel reinforcement structures for RC¹⁴ dating:

Old wrought iron fragments were recovered from core drilling at ~90 depth, coated with a hard, grey geopolymer limestone cladding loaded with fine osmium particles that can give off a potentially lethal poison in confined spaces. This is the secret 'curse' of Oak Island: when warm, fragments of the treasure deposit box release toxic osmium tetroxide gas from the reconstituted geopolymer limestone cladding:

Borehole drilling finds: mud, wood, a tiny metal bit and an insufferable amount of time-filler. Further analysis of the metal bit shows it contains a ridiculously small amount of gold, but also an inordinately large amount of the ridiculously rare osmium, which again is completely ignored.

At this point I just have to assume they don't know what the 'Os' stands for on the periodic table, further infuriating the nerd in me. They even bring a scientist in to analyze the metal thing. And she ignores the osmium as well, but focuses instead on the gold...⁴

These obvious mass media shenanigans are designed to hide the meteoric origin of osmium, manganese, zirconium and titanium measured by XRF in the limestone geopolymers lining the Oak Island deposit box. The reconstituted limestone geopolymer produced by the English alchemists was purposefully loaded with fine metallic particles obtained from meteorites most likely belonging to the C2 and/or C3 carbonaceous chondrites,⁵ which contain the highest levels of zirconium.⁶ What inspired development of these processes?

The works of Francis Bacon replicated Atlantean geopolymer limestone chemistry for megalithic construction of large pyramids for barefoot contact with magnetic pavements, enhancing ionization of the body fueled by colloidal electrom water.⁷ Specialized Atlantean techniques for the 'preparations' of geopolymer stone were mentioned in a Life Reading by trance medium Edgar Cayce on September 26, 1936 (Reading 1265-1):

Before that we find the entity was in the land now called the Egyptian, during those periods when there were those entering in from the northern land... The entity was of those peoples, and a close associate then of Araaraart as well as Arart and Ra-Ta, and the entity made for the building up of those influences for the archaeological researches as would be called of that day, as well as the preparations of stones, of gold, of all the various forms of building materials. The entity then was in the name Phar-Ar.

An explanation of the functions of Atlantean 'firestone' was given on December 20, 1933, relating the invention of Bakelite as a precursor to geopolymer chemistry formulations that followed (Reading 440-5):

About the firestone that was in the experience did the activities of the entity then make those applications that dealt with both the constructive and destructive forces in the period. It would be well that there be given something of a description of this, that it may be better understood by the entity in the present, as to how both constructive and destructive forces were generated by the activity of this stone.

In the center of a building, that today would be said to have been lined with non-conductive metals, or non-conductive stone –something akin to asbestos, with the combined forces of Bakelite or other non-conductors that are now being manufactured in England under a name that is known well to many of those that deal in such things.

Clairvoyant statements uttered by trance medium Edgar Cayce provide a concise explanation for the unusual technological combination of finely distributed metallic particles observed in a great majority of bedrock formations that attest to their artificial origin in the Paleo-Sanskrit Atlantean high civilization.

Remote sensing capabilities of satellite surveillance platforms can easily identify the presence of very high levels of particulate metals within these man-made geopolymer temple construction features by the use of infrared imaging. Latent heat is stored much more efficiently in metallic geopolymer stonework, including an abundance of geopolymer limestone pavement tiles mixed in with natural stone on the rocky shorelines encompassing the island. IR satellite monitoring of Oak Island has also revealed a deep subterranean base of UFO operations that has long been known to agencies of the American and Canadian government.

Oak Island, Nova Scotia, Canada (44.512309°N, 64.2872793°W) is located 5,057 miles from the Great Pyramid of present-day Giza, Egypt. This resonant distance interval comprises 20.32% of Earth's mean circumference ($^{127}/_{625}$), enabling efficient reception of infrasound standing wave resonance focused by the axis-symmetric structures of the Orion Pyramid Complex.

Geopolymer limestone formations below the Oak Island swamp and surrounding areas were manufactured by the Atlantean high civilization during the great expansion period from ~29,000-28,000 years ago, following the Great Flood cataclysm of ~30,240bp. The artificial composition of these ancient metallic limestone formations closely matches that of the cement-like cladding material adhering to iron fragments retrieved from drilling operations in the treasure deposit area.

Prospecting for artifacts by the team included sorting through tons of material removed from various depths obtained during drilling operations conducted in the vicinity of the treasure deposit site. A very large proportion of this material being investigated is comprised of geopolymer limestone pavement tiles made by gnomes, presenting flat walkway surfaces and geometrically angled sides visible in many video segments (above). These paving tiles contain the same high levels of metallic particles, yet no metal detectors are applied.

These findings were reconfirmed by underwater metal detection (S2,E5) and sub-surface conductivity scans of the Oak Island swamp (S2, E1 and S7, E3), revealing surprising results that were eventually dismissed by the investigators (below). The presence of high levels of gold particles can be seen dominating large areas:

An abundance of precious metals appeared in conductivity scans covering large areas of bedrock laying just 1.5m below the surface of the Oak Island swamp, showing broad patches of red indicating non-ferrous target alloys containing gold (above). Divers quickly recovered the gold-containing materials –composed of plain-looking limestone rocks. These gold-bearing limestone samples were entirely ignored, only shown sitting on the ‘war-room’ table, yet display all the hallmarks of Atlantean geopolymer pavements. Their geometric forms served the function as synthetic stone pavement tiles; a conclusion supported by SEM spectroscopy data:

Gold Alloy Flakes in Geopolymer Limestone Pavement Tiles

Element	% (with standard deviation)
Au	62.9% ± 1.3%
Cu	24.0% ± 0.6%
Ag	10.5% ± 1.6%
Zn	2.5% ± 0.2%

Gold Alloy Flakes in Geopolymer Limestone, Fe Fragments

Element	% (with standard deviation)
Au	65.0% ± 0.2%
Cu	27.0% ± 0.1%
Ag	5.3% ± 0.1%
Zn	2.1% ± 0.1%

The size and composition of Au-Cu-Ag-Zn alloy flakes embedded in the geopolymer limestone pavements recovered from the Oak Island swamp shows high consistency with gold alloy flakes found on the surfaces of geopolymer limestone cladding adhering to iron fragments recovered at 75-90’ in boreholes D2 and CD4.5.

In contrast to all other materials investigated by the team, no SEM images of these gold flakes are provided. Instead, we are only given a generic characterization by investigating scientists, who state that the gold alloy flakes are “stuck into the metal itself”, which is not an accurate assessment. In fact, the gold alloy flakes are embedded in a geopolymer limestone cladding adhering to the Fe fragments. Why would this be ignored?

This iconic stand of tall, red oaks was purposefully destroyed by Masonic agents in the 1930s, while an abundance of coastal live oaks (Quercus virginiana) are still distributed across the whole island today. The emblems of the Kings of the Stuart Family of England reveal a direct link to the Oak Island treasure deposit. Oak leaves frame the Stuart family crest, presenting a pair of red rampant lions with blue and white squares.

Before the 1930s, Oak Island was easily identified by several large, majestic specimens of red oak (Quercus rubra) along the point, which is why they were destroyed to hide the connection to the Stuarts. The rearing stance of the lion emblems of the Stewart family references lions on a rampage –iconography that had a strong impact on me as a young artist, and which I now associate with past life experiences as Charles II.

Charles II was the eldest surviving child of Charles I of England, Scotland and Ireland and Henrietta Maria of France. After execution of Charles I at Whitehall on 30 January 1649, at the climax of the English Civil War, the Parliament of Scotland proclaimed Charles II king in 1649... Cromwell defeated Charles II at the Battle of Worcester on 3 September 1651, and Charles spent 11 years in exile in France, the Dutch Republic and the Spanish Netherlands. On Charles's 30th birthday in 1660, he returned to England to public acclaim.

Considered one of the most popular English kings, Charles II was a tall, sharply dressed, keen-minded charmer known for constant philandering. He acknowledged at least 12 illegitimate children by various mistresses, but his affairs produced no legitimate heirs; he was succeeded by his younger brother James.

Edgar Cayce conducted Life Readings for Nikola Tesla that were altered by the Cayce ARE 'archivists' to hide his prior incarnations from the public, which included King Charles II. The Life Readings of Tesla's companion Lillie B. Delaney were also altered, and included an incarnation as Madame Roula Arseles, one of several Parisian mistresses who became involved with Charles Stuart II during his exile in France.⁸

Cayce's Life Readings also revealed the de Caus family hid Charles during part of his exile from 1651-1660. Salomon de Caus (Caux) (1576-1626, Paris) was a French artisan & hydraulic engineer who had worked for King James I. Celia de Caus was daughter of Guillaume de Caus, granddaughter of Salomon de Caus:

King Charles Stuart II
London, England

In the one before this we find in that land now known as France, and during the period of the exile of the ruler, or Charles II. The entity then among those who sheltered and aided this entity, and of the household of Caus, in the name Celia... The entity then one of high estate in that period, and of the household of Caus who ruled the streets, or was the burgher master of that portion of the city in which that ruler lived; and many in this present experience will be the friends, and foes, of this entity... [Reading 2713-5]

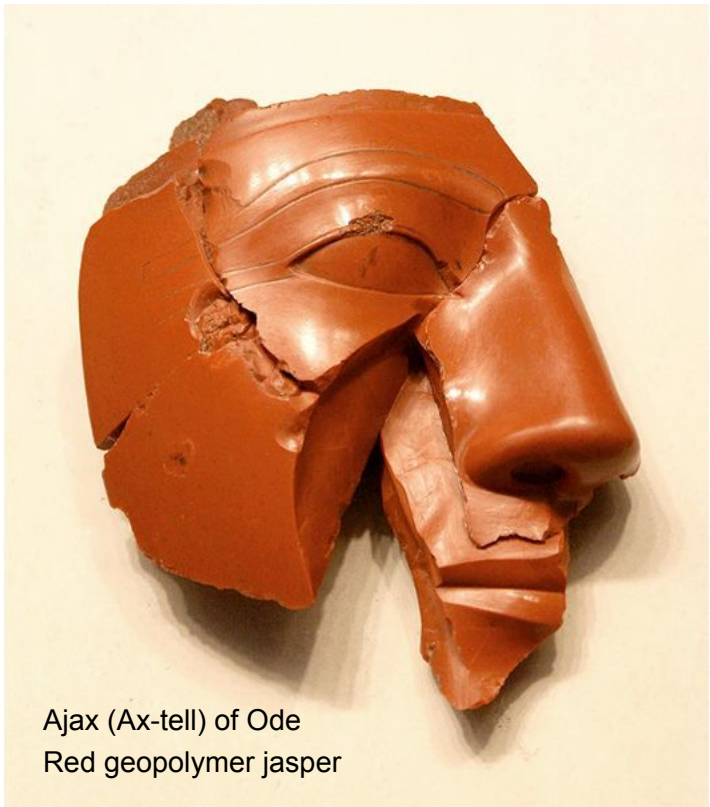

Longstanding connections between the Stuarts and de Caus family had been established decades prior:

The [Heidelberg] garden was commissioned by Frederick V, Prince-Elector of the Palatinate and the briefly-reigning "Winter King" of Bohemia, as a romantic tribute to his new bride, Elizabeth Stuart, the eldest daughter of James VI and I of Scotland and England. De Caus, an exiled French Huguenot who was a favorite of the Stuarts and had served as Elizabeth's tutor, seems to have possessed a variety of talents... The Heidelberg garden was not only a schlossgarten carved out of the earth, it was a walled world of waterworks, moving statues, and mechanical birds, all enhancing its wondrous reputation.⁹

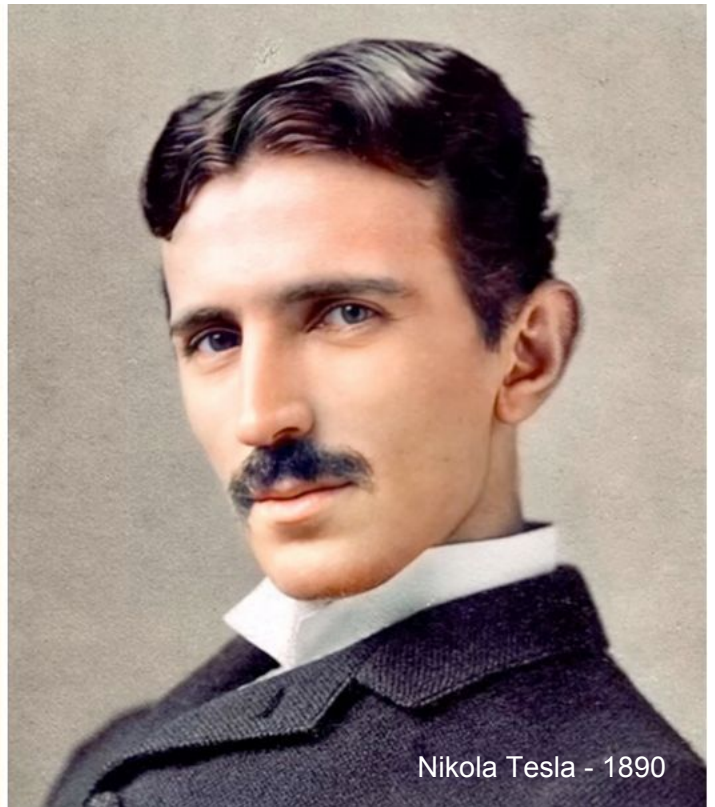

In 1610 de Caus returned to England to serve at the court of King Charles I and of Henry, Prince of Wales, whom he taught at drawing. Together with the architect Constantino de' Servi he built water features and a picture gallery in Richmond Palace... On 16th April 1606, Salomon de Caus married to Esther Picart. On 24th February 1607, was born his son Guillaume. Salomon de Caus died on 28th February, 1626, in Paris.¹⁰

Extensive historical records pertaining to this period confirm Charles Stuart II was in possession of highly advanced metallurgical knowledge that included alchemy procedures involving resonant transmutation of base metals into precious metals, as well as processes for manufacturing osmium-loaded geopolymer materials according to prior scientific advancements achieved by Sir Francis Bacon and Nicholas Flamel.

An extraordinary continuity observed in the sequential life experiences of Charles Stuart II, Nikola Tesla and Alex Putney appear deeply rooted in earlier knowledge obtained during the course a prior incarnation in ancient Greece as Pteomaeus, a technical demonstrator of geopolymer materials. The present research path reflects an earlier incarnation as Ajax of Ode, scientific leader of Atlantis and inventor of aurichalcum levitation sleds, advanced metal-loaded geopolymer materials and gravity motors for aerospace propulsion.

Ajax (Ax-tell) of Ode
Red geopolymer jasper

Nikola Tesla - 1890

King Charles Stuart II carried a subconscious, past life connection to the ancient subterranean complex situated below Oak Island, through his previous lifetime as Ajax of Ode, also called Ax-tell. Ajax was an Atlantean leader, scientific researcher and metamaterials inventor who lived through the Great Flood event that occurred ~30,240 years ago. Ajax was among those who predicted the cataclysmic inundation and broadcast evacuation warnings to all sectors of Atlantis many days prior to the onset of planetary disaster.

Compelling synchronicities emerge when comparing the relevant facts. King Charles II used osmium-loaded geopolymer blends redeveloped by his scientific instructor Francis Bacon designed to kill treasure looters, whereas in the present life I have been experimentally replicating Atlantean osmium-loaded geopolymer drinking vessels to restore Ayurvedic knowledge of the quantum healing functions of Soma positronic elixirs.

The great advances of Paleo-Sanskrit Ayurvedic medical knowledge were entirely lost to the modern world until the present restoration of phonon resonance calculations enabling phonon transfer alchemy procedures.

In 1675, Charles appointed “an astronomical observator... for perfecting the art of navigation”; Britain’s first scientific research institution. Charles’ scientific interests reflected formative studies with Sir Francis Bacon, whose skilled research methodology would later help him to evade multiple assassination attempts.

The Jesuit Order pushed for total subversion of England under King Charles II, instigating the 1665 Great Plague of London, the 1666 Great Fire of London, as well as the assassination plots of 1678 and 1683.¹² The timing of widespread arson attacks reflects the Satanists’ occult obsession with the number ‘666’:

Illuminati founder Adam Weishaupt who 'started' the order in Bavaria, Germany was a Jesuit. Also, the 'Scottish Rite' of Masonry which advocates destruction of national sovereignty in exchange for Illuminati government has allegedly been traced back to the Jesuit college at Clermont in Paris, as have other Jesuit-initiated Masonic rites...

The Illuminati headquarters in America may be hidden within the Masonic 'House of the Temple' in Washington DC, (Scottish Rite Headquarters) which is curiously enough set atop the pentagram-like street layout of the city itself. Former 33rd degree Mason and Past Master of all Scottish Rite bodies, Evangelist Jim Shaw tells of his own defection from the cult in his book 'The Deadly Deception'.

Shaw reveals... the Scottish Rite headquarters is filled with carvings, murals and many other representations of serpents! The High Masons apparently revered the 'serpent' symbol [representing Satan]. Thus the name of their ancient cult, which William Cooper refers to as the 'Cult of the Snake' or 'Dragon', a Satanic Cult which was very active among ancient gnostic (serpent) cults in Dynastic Egypt.¹³

As the US arm of the Jesuit octopus, the CIA/Nazi Rockefeller family runs the global pharmaceutical industry –a covert program of genocide that has been fully exposed over the last 2 years by a genetically engineered bioweapon pandemic attack on the global human population. Basic MRI brain scans can identify enlargement of the striatum region, typical of individuals belonging to this syndicate of psychopathic industrialist families.¹⁴

Christine Grady, transexual 'wife' of NIAID Director Dr. Anthony Fauci, belongs to the Abyx family of Swiss finance/mining wealth, whose emblem displays a viper eating a naked woman in front of envenomated water pales (above). This Roman insignia is used by the Visconti family and Alpha Romeo sportscars, referencing Bacchanalia festivals (dedicated to Bacchus, i.e. Baal, Belial, Baphomet) celebrating alcohol/drug intoxication, vampirism, ritual child sacrifice, cannibalism, fornication with animals and many other forms of degeneracy.

In May 2020, Madagascar President Rajoelina exposed the WHO had offered a $20 million bribe to poison the nation's artemisia crop. Political assassinations befell Presidents of African nations who defied dictates of the WHO, WEF and IMF. Pierre Nkurunziza was President of Burundi until his suspicious death on June 9, 2020, while John Magufuli –then President of Tanzania– was also assassinated on March 18, 2021. The genocidal control system of the Jesuit Order has claimed many victims, and targets the entire population.

Poisoning of public water systems has caused serious illness worldwide since the start of the Industrial Age, due to toxic additives such as fluoride, chlorine, nitrates and arsenic, among so many others. Further recent revelations have strongly implicated envenomation of public water systems with peptide toxins found in the venom of cobra and krait snakes, including phospholipases A2, acetylcholinesterases, proteases, serine proteinases, metalloproteinases, and l-amino acid oxidases that destroy body tissues on contact.¹⁵

Ancient knowledge of chemical interactions that mitigate animal toxins has been reaffirmed by many recent studies. Ayurvedic herbal supplements provide many benefits that include significant anti-venom effects:

- mucuna pruriens (bean powder)
- ashwagandha (root powder)
- Indian sarsaparilla (root tea)
- artemisinin (artemisia annua concentrate)
- Ionic lithium & shilajit Tibetan resin
- vitamin C (buffered) & vitamin D₃
- N-acetyl cysteine (NAC)
- melatonin (buffered)

For those who do not have access to well water sources for bathing and drinking, an inexpensive solution for treating envenomated water sources can be achieved by boiling –which effectively deactivates venom polypeptide neurotoxins.¹⁶ Heat causes polypeptide denaturation and aggregation at varying temperatures from 60-90°C (140-195°F), which cause high molecular mass peptides to form clusters and, as a result, hinders the binding ability of the enzyme. Bioactivity is thereby diminished or negated (Bloom et al. 2015).

CIA/Nazi bioweapon development for the Illuminati Cult is knowingly undertaken in direct service of Satan –a giant, venomous reptilian humanoid ET species– as revealed by the naming of patented additives such as ‘luciferase’.¹⁷ Research studies also reveal mRNA injections cause rabies, hepatitis and prion disease.

Exclusive use of human fetal kidney and fetal retinal cell lines (instead of chicken embryo cell lines used in traditional vaccines) is specifically designed to cause prion disease, also known as Kuru or Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD).¹⁸ Kuru was first discovered among indigenous groups in Papua New Guinea; caused by ritual cannibalism practices shared by Satanic cults in the US, which promote demonic spirit possession. Studies also reveal that these injections activate latent herpes zoster and small pox (Nigh & Seneff, 2021).

The entire architectural design of the Vatican Great Hall is an obvious representation of a venomous serpent, which can be readily observed from both the interior and exterior appearances of the building (above, below), making it an obvious Satanic Temple in plain sight. Jesuit Pope Francis is a major vaccine proponent. Many Bible passages describe disgusting effects of oral exposure to snake venom: partial or total loss of taste and smell (also experienced by those infected with COVID-19); even giving normal food a rotten taste and smell:

They enjoyed the sweet taste of wickedness, letting it melt under their tongue. They savored it, holding it long in their mouths. But suddenly the food in their bellies turns sour, a poisonous venom in their stomach. (Job 20:12-14)

Their talk is foul, like the stench from an open grave.

Their tongues are filled with lies. Snake venom drips from their lips. (Romans 3:13)

Rescue me, Lord, from evildoers; protect me from the violent, who devise evil plans in their hearts and stir up war every day. They make their tongues as sharp as a serpent's; the poison of vipers is on their lips. (Psalm 140:1-3)

So you testify against yourselves that you are the descendants of those who murdered the prophets.

Go ahead, then, and complete what your ancestors started! You snakes!

You brood of vipers! How will you escape being condemned to hell? (Matthew 23:31-33)

The penetrating truth of these Bible passages is becoming apparent to the entire world as the planned global pharmaceutical dictatorship scheme unravels right before the eyes of the alerted public. Satanic serpent symbolism emphasizes the venomous nature of the giant reptilian ET humanoids worshipped by the Sons of Belial; the ancient Atlantean denomination for individuals aligning with the negative spiritual orientation.

An interesting dialog emerged during a channeling session by psychic medium Laura Knight-Jadczyk on December 10, 1994 that linked the Oak Island site with nefarious activities of the ET reptilian giants:

Q: (L) What is buried on Oak Island? A: Regenerator.

Q: (L) What is a regenerator? A: Remolecularizer.

Q: (L) Who put it there? A: Lizard beings.

Q: (L) When did they put it there? A: 10,000 years ago, approximately.

Q: (L) Do they use it from time to time? A: No. Q: (L) Does it still work? A: It could.

Q: (T) What is the purpose of a remolecularizer? (L) Yeah, what do you use it for? Entertain your friends at parties? A: Regenerate matter. Q: (L) Such as physical bodies? A: Yes.

Q: (L) So, you just go and stand next to it or inside it or whatever and it regenerates you? A: Any matter.

Q: (L) Well, that would be a really handy thing to have in the barn. Is there any way to get it out of there?

A: Maybe. Are you planning an expedition?

Q: (L) No, we're just being nosy. How deep is it buried? A: Deep.

The term 'lizard beings' is a nickname for the giant reptilian ET humanoid species previously identified by this author as Homo draconis; as represented by ancient artists and modern UFO abductees (above). This unusual topic of inquiry was picked up again during a later session with the Cs conducted on April 22, 1995:

Q: (L) Okay, you said at that time that a Transdimensional Atomic Remolecularizer was buried at Oak Island. Is that correct? A: Yes. Q: (L) Who buried it there? A: Learn...

Q: (L) What I read about Oak Island was that there were legends of lights being seen there prior to 1703. A: Yes.

Q: (L) Prior to 1703 would put the burial of whatever is there at least prior to that time, correct? A: Yes.

Q: (L) Were those lights the lights of craft of other beings other than the natives of this planet? A: EM profile.

Q: (L) What was noticed when the kids arrived on the Island was that a limb was sawed off of a tree over the depression and there were marks of the rope and pulleys had been utilized. (T) If something more advanced dug the pit, they wouldn't have used chain hoists and pulleys. (L) That is what I am getting at. So, if there was evidence of this kind of stuff on the tree, it would seem to indicate that somebody had been doing something there who was a little more human or limited in their technology, is that correct? A: Yes.

Q: (L) Now, my thought is that, it is beyond human technology to have produced that pit at that point in history?

A: Beyond known technology.

Q: (L) And yet humans may have been involved in that activity? A: Bingo.

Q: (J) Think back to when we were talking about it and you mentioned the lights.

A: Some humans have always communed with "higher" powers.

Q: (L) So, humans may have actually... (J) Like those little kids that broke into those houses and did all that damage. They could have done it themselves, but they had to be directed to do it. I think it is a good analogy.

A: Not good analogy, we are speaking of conscious communion in this and other instances.

Q: (L) Okay, there was conscious communion between humans and other powers in the building of this pit. What group of humans was this? A: It's fun to learn...

Q: (L) There was the French and the English... When was the pit dug? A: 1500s. Nationality is not issue.

Q: (T) Well, this pit was dug sometime in the middle of the 1500s... A: Access sect information...

Q: (F) Was there a sect from that era that claimed communion? A: Yes...

Q: (L) When they drilled into the pit, some bits of gold came up and a piece of parchment and maybe some other odds and ends. What were these? A: Alchemy.

Q: (T) The remolecularizer made it. (L) Why not? If these people were involved in doing this, why did they do it?

A: Instructed to do it. Q: (L) They were instructed by higher powers they were in contact with, correct? A: Yes...

Q: (J) Maybe it was a lesson. (T) Is it buried there in that location for a specific reason? A: Sure.

Q: (L) Does it do something? (T) Does the location itself have something to do with the purpose of it? A: Magnetic.

Q: (T) Are there other ones buried on the planet? A: Yes.

Q: (T) Are they aligned to each other on the planet in some kind of geometric pattern? A: Maybe.

Q: (T) Do they all work together? A: Maybe...

Q: (L) Okay. I want to get back to the function of this thing. You say it is buried not to be dug up. It is actually buried to stay there? Is that correct? A: Yes.

Q: (L) Then that explains a lot of things about the way it was buried. There was found, at a certain level, a rock with carving on it. It was destroyed through carelessness. I am curious as to what this said. Can you access this and tell us what it said? A: Measure marker.

Q: (J) Could it be possible this device was somehow related to the crystal pyramid of Atlantis? A: In a small sense.

Q: (J) Did the pyramid have anything to do with powering this device? A: Yes.

Q: (J) It is obvious that the device was buried long after the pyramid was there, but it may have tapped into the power. (L) Is this device continuously operational? A: No.

Q: (L) What stimulates it to go into operation? That is, assuming it does. A: Magnetic anomalies.
 Q: (J) Is it affected by earthquakes? A: Can be.
 Q: (L) Are these magnetic anomalies ones that occur naturally on the planet? A: Both.
 Q: (L) So, they can occur naturally on the planet or they can be generated or stimulated by some other source?
 A: Yes... Q: (J) Is this device a doorway for entry into this dimension? A: Can be used as such.

Surprising technological connections discussed by the Cs expanded far beyond the evidence of alchemy practices of 16th century English depositors, and included information related to the Atlantean geopolymer firestone temple constructions razed thousands of years ago and occupied by the Baal ET predators. The presence of a "transdimensional atomic remolecularizer" below Oak Island may bring future consequences.

In another interesting dialog that took place on December 5, 1994, Laura had asked the Cassiopaeans about inspirational sources that may have influenced the ideas of 19th century Theosophist Helena P. Blavatsky:

Q: (L) Okay. Now, I would like to know, for the sake of all the Theosophists around the world, what was the source of the information in the book "Isis Unveiled" by Helena Blavatsky?
 A: Orions STS and STO. 6th Density.
 Q: (L) So, her information was from both sides? And it's up to the reader to figure out which is which? A: Good idea.

A comparison of spiritual concepts shared in the literary works of Helena Blavatsky (1831-1891) and Laura Knight-Jadczyk reveals a continuity of ideas that strongly indicates a past life connection. Laura even acknowledged this is a subconscious form during a more recent discussion from October 14, 2017:

(L) When we started talking to the Cs, the kind of stupid, ignorant, New Agey, Madame Blavatskyite kinds of things I would ask... (Artemis) They were endearing. (L) They embarrass me now that I was so stupid! (Artemis) Oh, don't judge yourself so harshly. I ask banana questions all the time.

The progression of spiritual ideas linking the two authors reflects an even stronger physical affinity. Close comparison of photographs of Helena Blavatsky and Laura Knight-Jadczyk taken ~125 years apart show a strong likeness; emphasizing their hands in an identical manner. Both were/are rebellious tobacco smokers:

In polite Western Society of the late 19th century, it was very unusual for women of HP Blavatsky's social status to smoke... HP Blavatsky was a notorious rebel in this area. The attitude of contemporaries to HPB's smoking is illustrated by the following incident, which took place in 1875... Hiram Corson, professor of Anglo-Saxon and English Literature at Cornell University... invited HPB for a carriage ride to see the countryside but was worried that if she smoked in the carriage, this would create a bad impression and harm his reputation. He therefore begged her not to smoke. The journey began but after only a short distance HPB was desperate for a cigarette and told him that she must have a smoke or she would jump out of the carriage.

Corson was in a state of panic but HPB just asked him "what if people see me smoke?" What's the harm in that?" and went on to tell him that people would just think she was a gypsy. Corson found a quiet spot and ordered his driver to stop the carriage. HPB got out and quickly rolled a cigarette, which she smoked in front of an amazed carriage driver.¹⁹

These significant factors strongly implicate Laura Knight-Jadczyk as the reincarnation of Helena Blavatsky. Laura has expressed deep interest in the very same obscure, arcane subjects as Helena, even quoting the same legends of famous European alchemists in their writings pertaining to the Count of Saint-Germaine:

One of the next threads of the legend [of the alchemist known as the Count of Saint-Germaine] was gathered into the hands of Helena Blavatsky who claimed that Saint-Germain was one of the "hidden masters" along with Christ, Buddha, Appollonius of Tyana, Christian Rosencreutz, Francis Bacon and others. A group of Theosophists traveled to Paris after WWII where they were told they would meet the Count; he never showed up. And, finally, in 1972, a Frenchman named Richard Chanfray was interviewed on French television. He claimed to be Saint-Germain and, supposedly, in front of television cameras, transmuted lead into gold on a camp stove!²⁰

Experimental alchemical processes developed by Nicholas Flamel (1330-1418) deserve greater attention than false claims attributed to the mystery 'Count'. Flamel was mentioned in a session September 16, 1995:

Q: (L) Back when we were talking about the pit on Oak Island, and you asked me to do some research on it, the answers I came up with were that the responsible group were alchemists. Is this correct. A: Yes.

Q: (L) Was one of the alchemists involved Nicholas Flamel? A: Yes.

Q: (L) Is it true that there is an enclave of alchemists that live somewhere in the Pyrenees... A: Yes.

Q: (L) Is this the group that you referred to as "The Quorum" in a previous session? A: Partly.

Q: (L) Do these alchemists use this power as talked about by David Hudson to enhance their longevity and their physical health? A: And to control.

Q: (L) Are there people in this enclave who live for literally hundreds, if not thousands, of years? A: Open.

Q: (L) How does this monoatomic gold control others? A: Too complex to answer tonight, as energy is waning.

Elements of the Oak Island alchemy discussion were elaborated on during a subsequent session with the Cassiopaeans that took place on April 11, 1998, among many other subjects thrown into the arcane mix:

Q: Ummm, in reading this funny book I just finished, I discovered that there is the tradition of the Ark of the Covenant being in Ethiopia. This guy did a bunch of research on it, and it seems possible that it is there, and that it may even be active. Is it, in fact, in the church of St. Mary of Zion in Ethiopia? A: No.

Q: Where is it? A: If we were to reveal this to you, it would be akin to giving a hand grenade to a baby!!

Q: Well, I just thought I would ask!... Did we have Templars there, or what was going on? Was the Ark there and was it then taken somewhere else? A: The Ark of the Covenant is not what you think it is.

Q: You guys said that it was a power cell... What do you mean... What is the Ark? A: See Oak Island.

Q: It seems that the Templars were in charge of building the Cathedral at Chartres, and there is a tableaux on one of the porches of Melchizedek and the Queen of Sheba. Equidistant between them is the Ark of the Covenant in a cart. Melchizedek is holding a cup that is supposed to be the Holy Grail. Inside this cup is a cylindrical object of stone. What is this? A: Greater sight.

Q: What?! (A) Is it a symbol or a device? A: Why cannot it be both?

Q: (A) It can be both, but is it both? A: Yes.

Q: (A) So, it is a device for greater sight like a crystal ball, yes? A: Only when utilized exactly precisely...

Laura Peppard - 2006

Highly interesting information shared through the Cassiopaea channel indicates a direct connection between the Oak Island treasure deposit of the Stuart Kings and the work of alchemist Nicholas Flamel. In 2009, I was reminded of this particular Cs session while in discussion with psychic medium Laura Peppard following an aura reading she had given for me at the Reno Psychic Institute in Nevada.

While speaking of my past life connection to the inventor Nikola Tesla, Laura Peppard related her own sense of personal connection to past life experiences as the alchemist Nicholas Flamel. Laura's long held conclusion is certainly supported by comparison of her physical features with those of alchemist Nicholas Flamel, preserved in a woodcut and an ink drawing (above). Key past life experiences of both Peppard and Knight-Jadczyk have contributed to their development of psychic abilities in this life.

Psychic intuition allows an individual to remotely perceive realities concealed from direct observation; often times hidden far below ground. The Reno Psychic Institute is located near the shoreline of an ancient lake that once covered much of the surrounding desert, where the illusion of a natural landscape is refuted by large geopolymer debris fields that mark the sites of ancient temple constructions razed to the ground long ago. This same conclusion was presented in an article by The Stockton Record on June 19, 1934, reporting on the compelling claims of a man named J.C. Browne who had discovered an ancient subterranean city:

Eighty Stockton citizens today attempted to piece together reasons for the disappearance of J.C. Brown, 79-year-old geologist, who had promised to lead them to riches hidden by the "lost race of Lemuria." Police, too, were interested and sought Brown for purposes of questioning.

Brown began organizing a band of followers here six weeks ago after telling a Stockton newspaper man that in 1904 he had discovered a tunnel in the Cascade mountains leading to a cavern filled with relics of an apparently lost race. The newspaperman took Brown to Harry Noyes Pratt, curator of the Haggin Memorial Museum, who gave him a list of people who might be interested in Brown's story.

Among them was John C. Root, retired printer, 1784 North San Joaquin Street. Root took Brown into his house and gradually an organization was formed with the purpose of participating in an expedition and exploration of Brown's cavern. Meetings were held twice daily and the followers grew to 80 in number. Brown's original story expanded to such an extent that his followers were told, and many believed, that the cavern held the secret to the lost race and continent of Lemuria.

Brown, despite the fact that in the early part of the year he had lived in the Federal Shelter, allegedly told his organization that he was worth 40,000,000 and owned five boats, one of which, a glass-bottomed craft, would arrive here Sunday to take the party north to search for the "lost continent" off the coast of Washington.

Gradually, as Brown's story expanded, some of his followers report, mysticism, occultism and other isms entered into the organization's discussions. Some, it is reported, actually gave up positions and disposed of furniture and other belongings so they would be free to accompany Brown on the expedition. Leaving Root's home yesterday morning, Brown left word that a surprise awaited his followers if they would gather at the Root home at 1 p.m. People began to arrive before noon, and most of them remained until early this morning. Brown failed to return.

Brown had claimed that he had photographs and other proof of his discovery in a Texas bank. This proof was demanded of him recently by Curator Pratt, and, it is understood, was given to Pratt yesterday or the latter would withdraw from any further dealings in the matter. Some of Brown's followers today were of the belief that the man manufactured the fantastic story from one of Bullwar-Lytton's novels. Some, however, clung to the belief that Brown would return and make good on his promise to reveal the "lost city".

Meetings at the Root home had attracted the attention of neighbors, some of whom thought political meetings were in progress. Police, however, began inquiring into the matter when it received a report that a "Silver Shirt" organization was being formed. This report was denied in the Record Saturday by Root, who, however, declined to reveal the purpose of the meetings. One of the followers, who today still clung to his belief in Brown, said he had "psychic information" that Mr. Brown is all right.

On an index card at the Federal Shelter is listed information that Brown suffered as an amnesia victim in 1932 and that he entertained fears that time to time that he was being followed. He told his followers that, being a millionaire, he feared being kidnapped and therefore appeared incognito. One of the leaders in the organization denied this afternoon that the organization was a religious cult. "Brown had a most fascinating story and many of those attending the meetings were interested in the study of mysticism and occultism. Unless a person understands or has some knowledge of these matters, he could not understand the meetings," this leader said.

The natural question of the initiated is "What is the lost continent of Lemuria?" After much poring over encyclopedias, one finds that it is a mythical continent believed by scientists to hold the key to a lost civilization. A well-educated man, Brown achieved what he had been told would be impossible, the organizing of a large party without a semblance of proof for the fantastic story which he used as a lure. What was Brown's objective? That question today had police as well as his followers, some of them unshaken yet in their faith, pondering.

So far as police or the writer have been able to discover, Brown never asked for one cent while in Stockton. The only money which he received for any person was $5, given by a friend while the man lived at the federal shelter, so far as could be learned.

The only other question is Brown's mental state. Those with whom he associated assert he is rational, despite a notation on his Federal Shelter record that he was an amnesia victim in 1932 and on three occasions reported that somebody was following and threatening him. The fear that he had met with foul play was expressed last night among those who waited in Root's home for his return as they gathered in the house, on the front porch and in the back yard awaiting his "surprise".

Among those who waited one could count those imbued with the spirit of the seed sown by Brown, that the mysterious excursions aboard a glass-bottomed boat—a story which did not figure in Brown's original tale—had not been willed by the Indian "masters" to start at this time. Brown had told the time was "near at hand". Who are the Indian "masters"? They are the master-minds, traced to East Indian mysticism, who ruled Brown's actions, who protected him and who were to tell him when the time was propitious for the start of the expedition.

"It was the will of the masters," one man said while he sat smoking on the front porch. "If the masters could not protect him, they could not protect us when we got there. We could all be annihilated in five minutes! He didn't say where he was going, did he? No. He always went alone. Perhaps he has been kidnapped. He had been once before, you know. He promised us a surprise. Well, it's here, isn't it? He didn't return at 1 o'clock."

Brown's original story, as told to a representative of the Record a month and a half ago, probably for the first time in Stockton, minus details concerning his personal history, follows:

"I found this cave while working in the Cascade mountains for the Lord Cowdray Mining Company of England. I noticed a section of rock in the face of a cliff which did not jibe with the formation of the rest of the mass. After removing the rock, I entered a tunnel which curved downward. 3 miles from the mouth of the tunnel, which was seven feet wide and 10' foot high, I struck a cross section where this ancient race apparently had mined copper.

"The air in one section was bad. I believe the other cross sections outcropped on some other part of the mountain. The decline continued, and 11 miles inside the mountain and approximately 2,300 feet from the surface I struck what I called 'The Village'.

"Two rooms about 12 by 20 feet were filled with copper and gold tablets, about three by four inches and concave, so that one laid inside the other. The rooms were literally full of these plates, inscribed neatly. Another room contained many weapons. The tempered-copper spears were so that one could bend the head of the weapon to the base of the shaft and it would spring back into place.

“Streets were laid out in the village. In one long room were laid at angles to the wall 27 skeletons, the smallest of which was 6 feet 6 inches and the tallest more than 10 feet. In another room lay, apparently embalmed by some secret process, the bodies of a man and a woman, dressed in royal robes, whom I believe were the king and queen of this race.

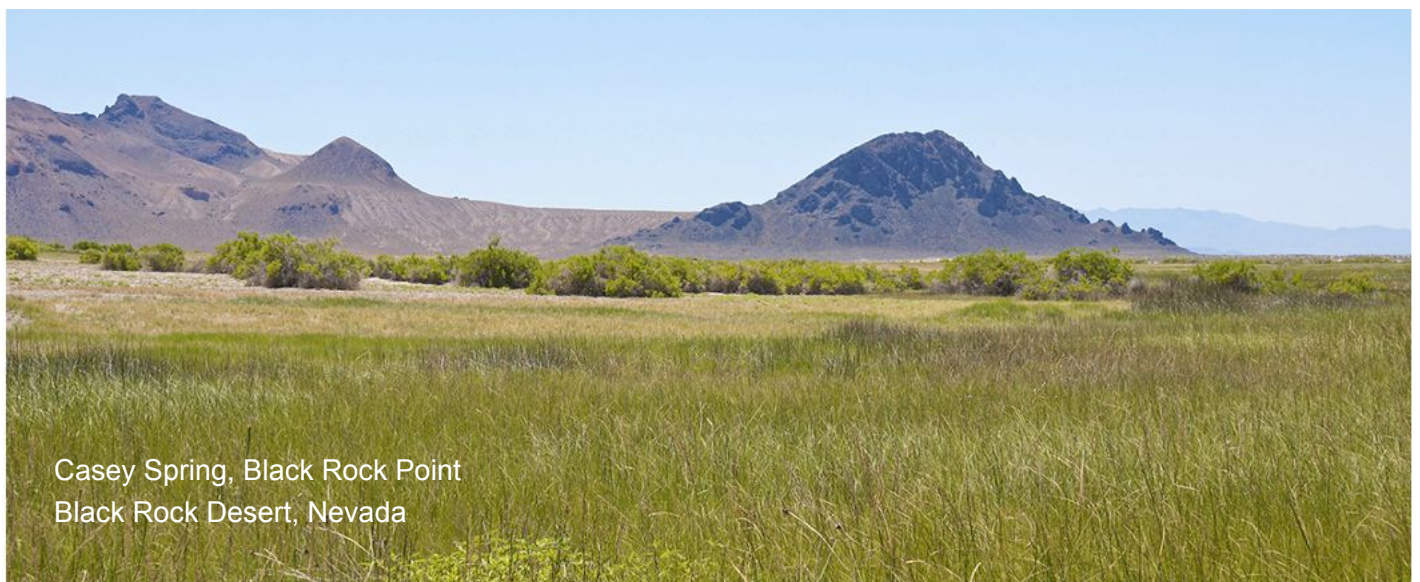

“The worship room was beautiful to behold. There on the walls were three great crosses not of the conventional modern type, and a sun designed, worked in copper and gold. The streamers from the sun were worked in gold stringers. There were, I believe, 13 statues made of copper and gold.

“I believe this race of people forms an important link in ancient American civilization. They were highly skilled craftsmen, as their work shows. Because there was a glow to three of these statues, I believe they used radium, and I believe it was with the use of radium that they tempered copper.

“My wish is to enlist a corps of trained people, whom I shall pay well for their services, to assist me in cataloging these specimens. I want the relics in this cave to remain intact. Those in two other caves which I have located may go to those who aid me.

“In a vault in a Texas bank I have pictures of this scene and papers. You see, my family planned to exploit the cave themselves. My wife's father, my wife, my two daughters and an old college chum. A series of tragedies struck me. First one died, then another; one was killed in an accident and the others died. I was hurt in an accident. I lost all heart in this ambition, but I'm getting back on my feet again and, if my health holds out, I will get started.

“Have you ever studied or read anything about the lost continent of Lemuria? Scientists claim it is the connecting link in the story of civilization. I believe here is the key to that lost continent.”

Casey Spring, Black Rock Point
Black Rock Desert, Nevada

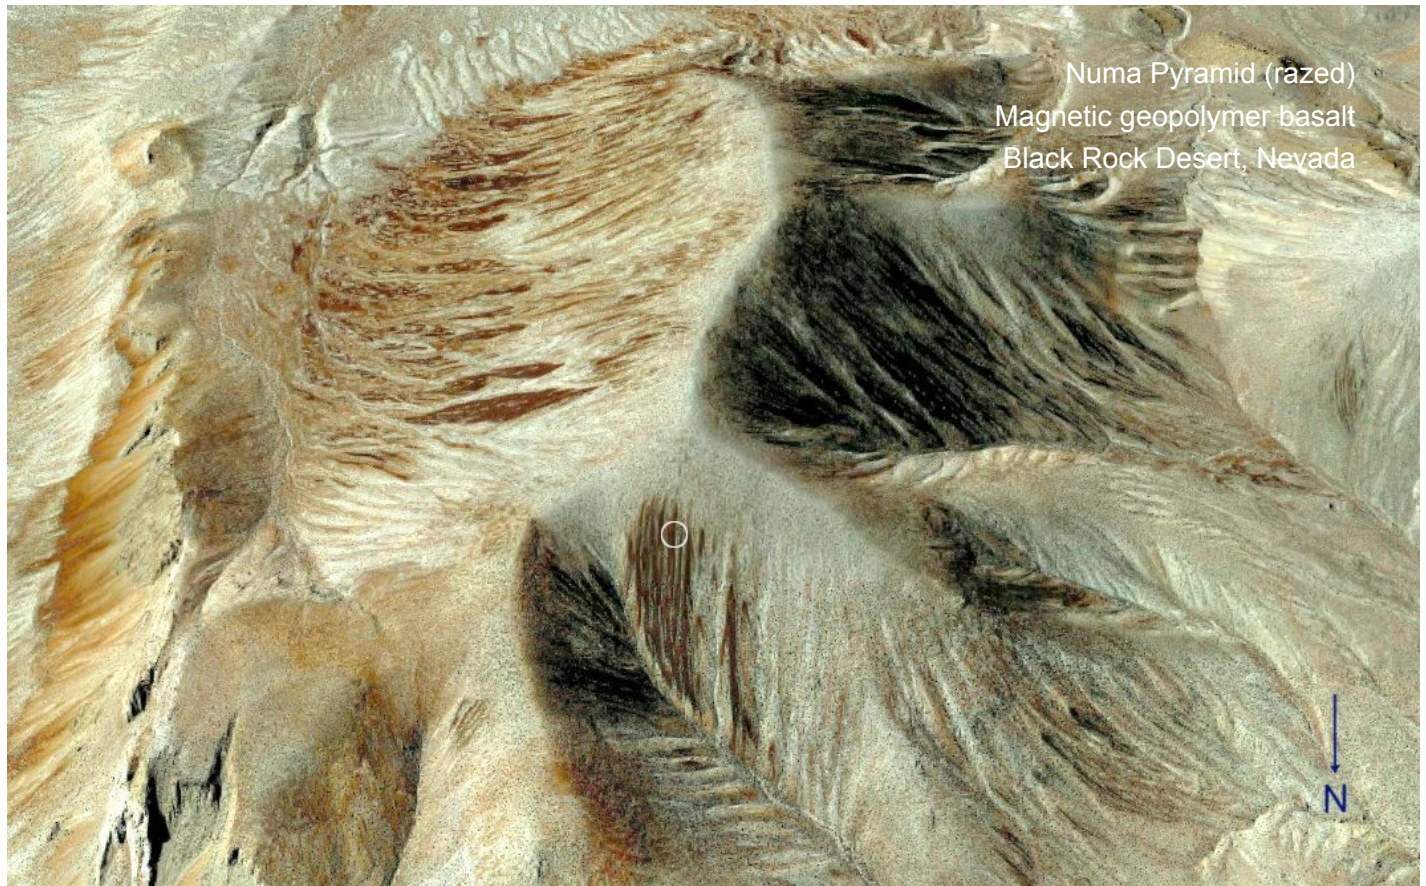

As an epilogue to J.C. Brown's story, years later, a doctor who was part of Brown's expedition, wrote, “I was a curious young man at the time, always interested in occult lore. Anything that smelled of adventure grabbed my interest. Brown's stories were fascinating. They many have been tall stories about mythical things by an old man looking for companionship. Somehow, over the years, I've gained respect for the old man. I believe he was telling the truth. I don't know his reasons, but I think he changed his mind at the last minute and decided not to reveal the location of the “lost treasure vault of the Lemurian giants.”

Nobody will ever know what lead J.C. Brown to abandon his expedition. But according to a Basque shepherd, J.C. Brown died in 1936 and is buried in the Black Desert of Nevada, near the famed Lost Padre Mine. Nobody can say for certain how much truth there is to the J.C. Brown legend, although it remains one of Mount Shasta's most enduring and popular legends.²¹

The original 1934 Stockton Record article and all follow-up articles on this subterranean discovery contain blatant falsehoods designed to hide the exact location of the site. Brown's account provides valid scientific conclusions concerning the composition of radiant alloys of the Atlantean civilization—a topic of such great importance that he was murdered to limit the exposure of his archeological discovery to the general public.

False reporting of many facts in this case follow a clear pattern of serial cover-up operations conducted by the US government through the Stockton and Los Angeles Police Departments. The Stockton Record report effectively obscured the identity of the site discoverer by omitting an 'e' from his last name and stating his nationality as British when he was a US citizen born in Illinois, who served in the latter part of World War II.

The news reporter for the Record also altered the middle initial of J.C. Browne's associate in Stockton. US census records confirm the middle initial of John Root, host of site exploration meetings, was actually 'W.' –not 'C.' as published. This alteration suggests Mr. Root had been told the location of the underground city.

Every article published on this subject since the original Stockton Record hit piece has falsely associated Browne's discovery with the Mount Shasta area of northern California, due to the presence of a different underground city there named 'Telos'. Conflating the two sites has successfully diverted the attention of independent researchers away from the actual discovery site, which is revealed here for the first time.

Scant details pertaining to J.C. Browne's suspicious death implicate that his discovery took place in the Black Rock Desert of northwest Nevada. Stockton is 238 miles away from Mount Shasta, yet the actual discovery site was situated 250 miles east of Stockton. Browne was murdered while accessing the 'village' through a rectangular tunnel formed by black basalt that contrasted the natural limestone bedrock (above).

There is no death record available for J.C. Browne –only the obscure reference to a Basque shepherd who stated that he died in 1936 in the Black Rock Desert. The inclusion of this odd detail suggests Browne was most likely murdered by US government agents at the Hardin City mining community, where springs provided greenery for sheep and provided shelter for Basque shepherders from the 1850s to the 1950s.

The unusual life and death of J.C. Browne has been occluded from history due to the great importance of his discoveries. John Christopher Browne was born in Illinois in 1885, while both of his parents were born in England. In 1904, J.C. was employed as a field geologist for the Lord Cowdray Mining Company of England, prospecting for potentially valuable metallic ores in northern Nevada's Black Rock Desert at the age of 19.

Military records show J.C. Browne had served in the 6th Cavalry as a member of Troops H and G in 1917, and as 1st Lieutenant at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia assisting the Motor Transport Corps in 1920. Nevada marriage records reveal J.C. Browne married 'Naomi Maxwell McCahan' (alias) years later in Las Vegas on November 16, 1928. The entire arrangement was quickly annulled, however, after Browne eventually recognized the relationship as a 'honeytrap' espionage operation of the Los Angeles police department.

In the 1930 US census, J.C. Browne was listed as 'single', unemployed and living alone in his own home worth $25,000 in Los Angeles, California. In the following years, he made arrangements to return to the site he had discovered in 1904. Before he could make his journey in 1932, Browne was attacked and beaten into a state of amnesia, and delivered by police authorities to recover at a federal shelter under observation.

After sufficiently recovering his memory, Browne reworked his plans to return to the hidden city, this time seeking the help of other interested parties. With this clear goal in mind, he enlisted the aid of John W. Root (b. Mar 8, 1886 - d. Oct 12, 1970) of Stockton, California who agreed to organize a large tour group of the underground city in the Black Rock Desert of Nevada. During a series of regular meetings to inform the tour group and make preparations, Browne openly confided that he had been stalked on multiple occasions.

On June 18, 1934 Browne was abducted hours before the group's scheduled departure from Stockton to finally revisit the ancient site. The June 19, 1934 cover-up article published in The Stockton Record made many false claims concerning Browne's identity –altering his nationality and surname, falsely stating his age to be 79 when has actually 49, and claiming he had a wife and two daughters when he was actually single.

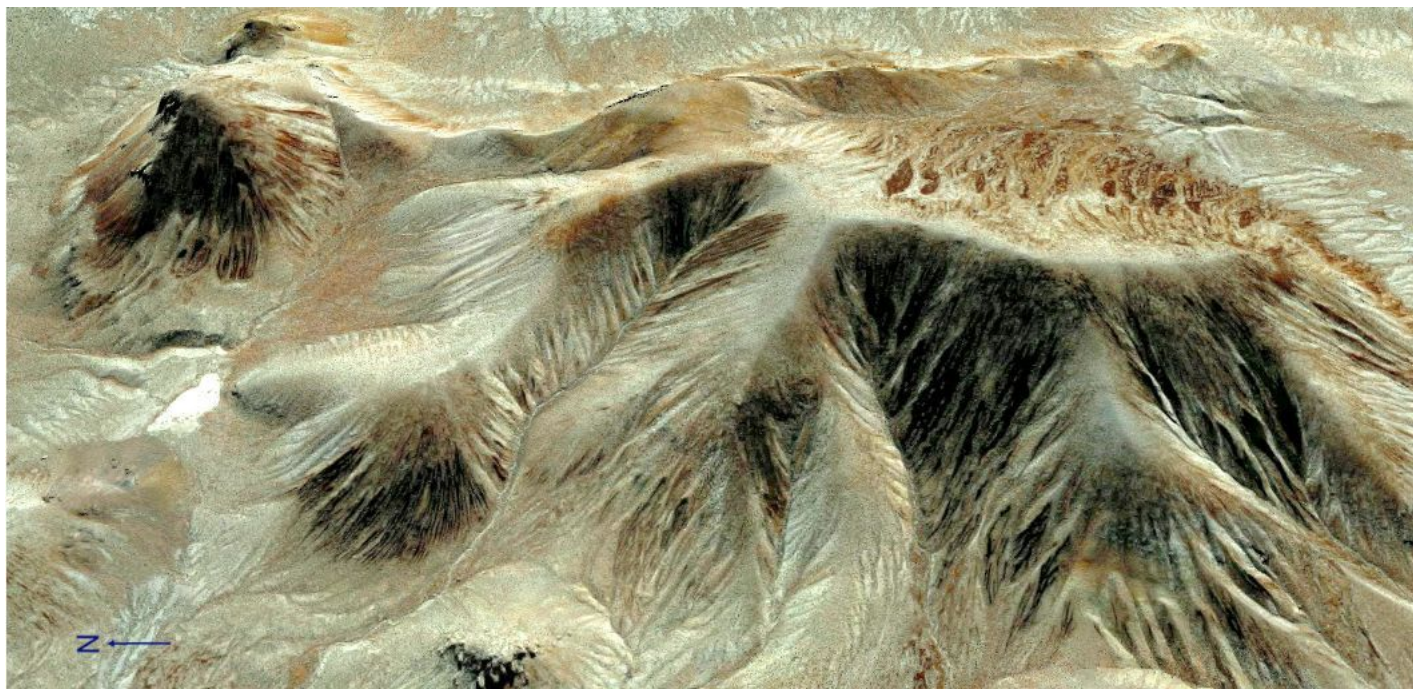

The cover-up piece mocks J.C. Browne as a fool searching for the lost continent of Lemuria using a glass-bottom boat off the California coast, while leaving his actual account to the last section of the article. Here the reader is informed –contrary to all the absurdity– Browne had gained much credibility by not asking for funding, instead offering payment for surveying the underground site and cataloguing the trove of artifacts.

Scientific assessments shared by Browne regarding his subterranean discoveries were met with severe subterfuge from police authorities and news media outlets due to their great accuracy, which revealed high technology relating to advanced Ayurvedic radionuclide medicine and electroluminescent alloys used in the manufacture of antigravitic hulls for aerospace vehicles. Samples of radium-containing Atlantean alloys had previously been obtained for laboratory testing by the Smithsonian Institute from Shin-au-av city below Death Valley, California. J.C. Browne, Fred White and Fred Thomasson were murdered to hide these facts.

This mass media cover-up has faltered in the digital age, with broadening access to research tools including census databases and satellite imagery. The mandala distribution pattern of the global pyramid network, defined by the quantum quadratic function $[z_{n+1} = z_n^2]$, facilitates accurate identification of Atlantean sites.

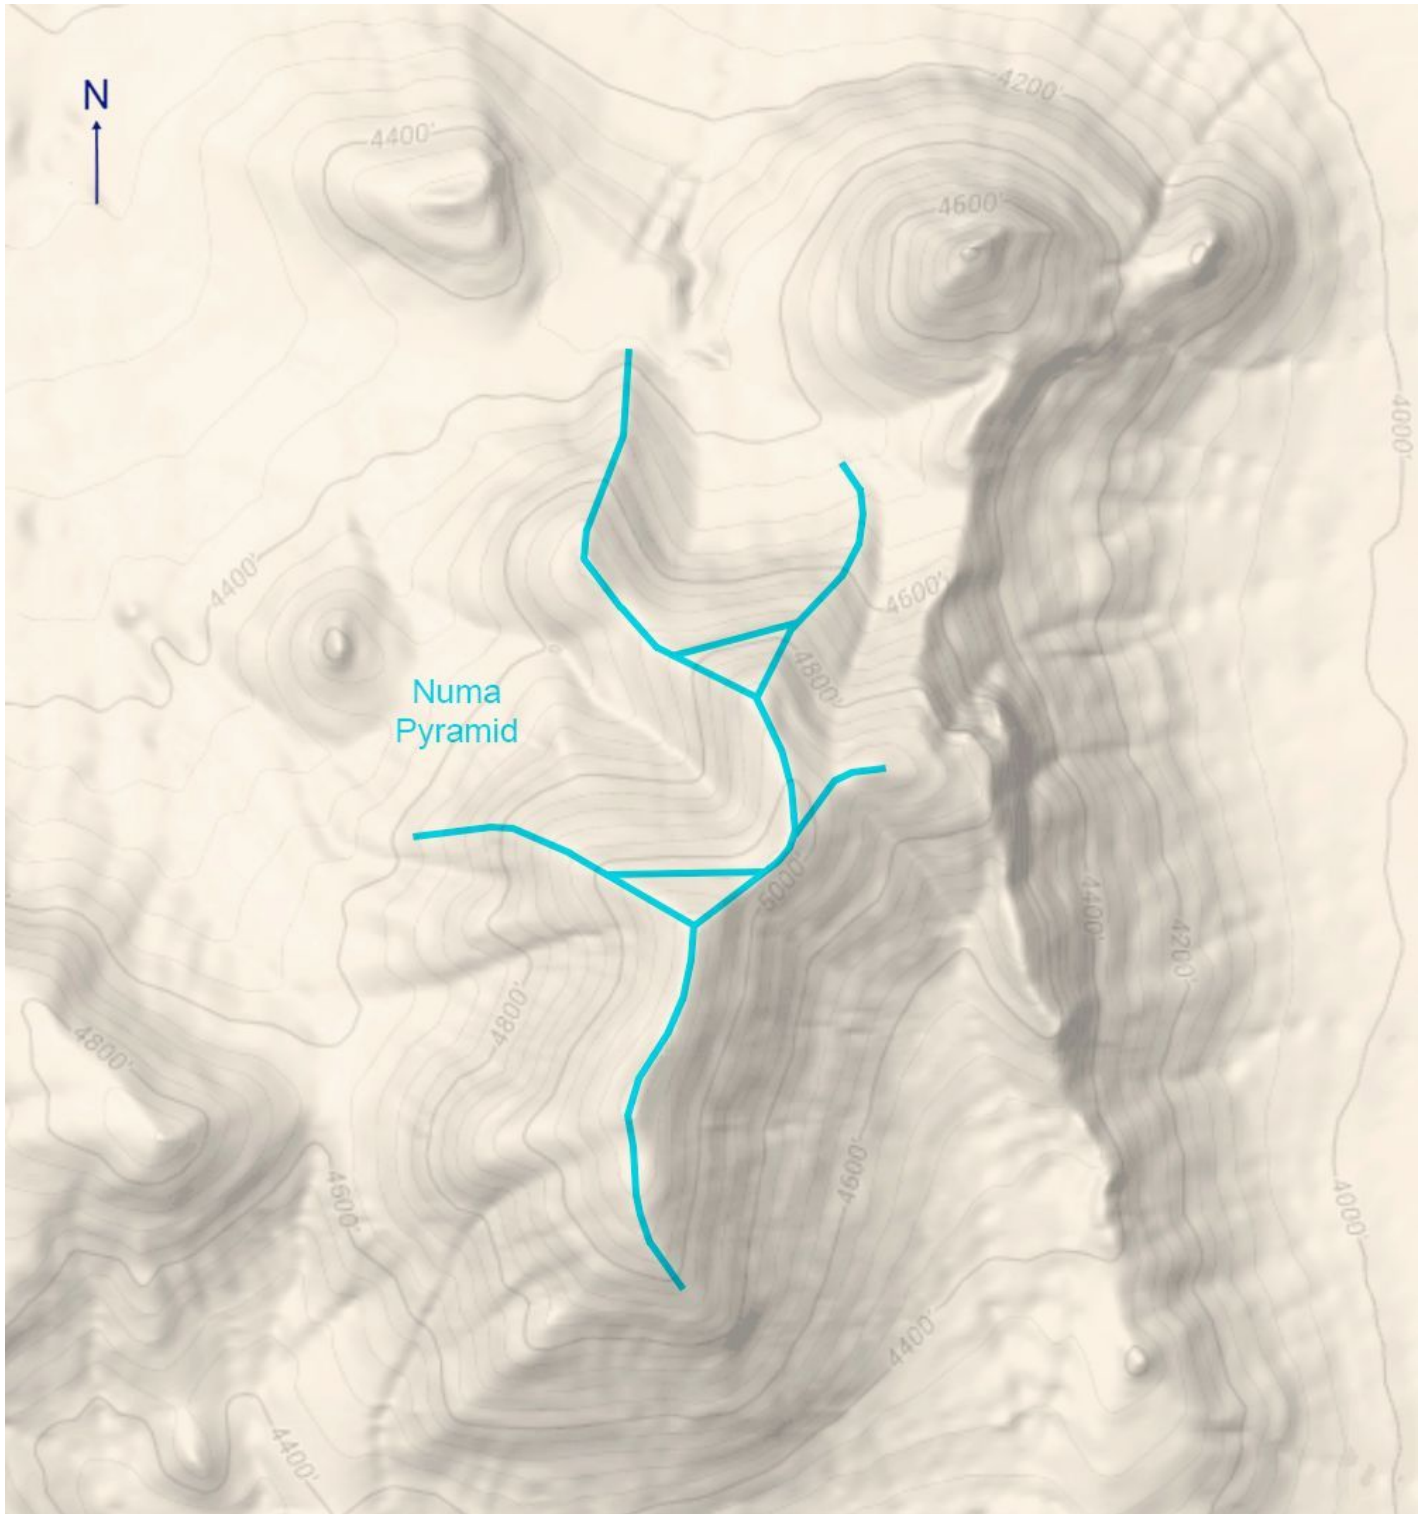

Drinkable water sources are crucial for subsistence on the parched playa and rough mountain terrain of the Black of the Desert. A turn-of-the-century silver mining community had built Hardin City; a few small adobe buildings situated near clear water springs with special "preservative" properties, which were abandoned in 1868. J.C. Browne had used this shelter while accessing the subterranean complex on various occasions.

The razed remains of this temple site present geopolymer basalt loaded with black magnetite (Fe_3O_4) and red iron oxide (Fe_2O_3) that can be easily discerned from the underlying material. These distinctly colored geopolymer façading pavements were stripped from the limestone bedrock formations long ago (opposite).

Numa Pyramid (razed)
Magnetic geopolymer basalt
Black Rock Desert, Nevada

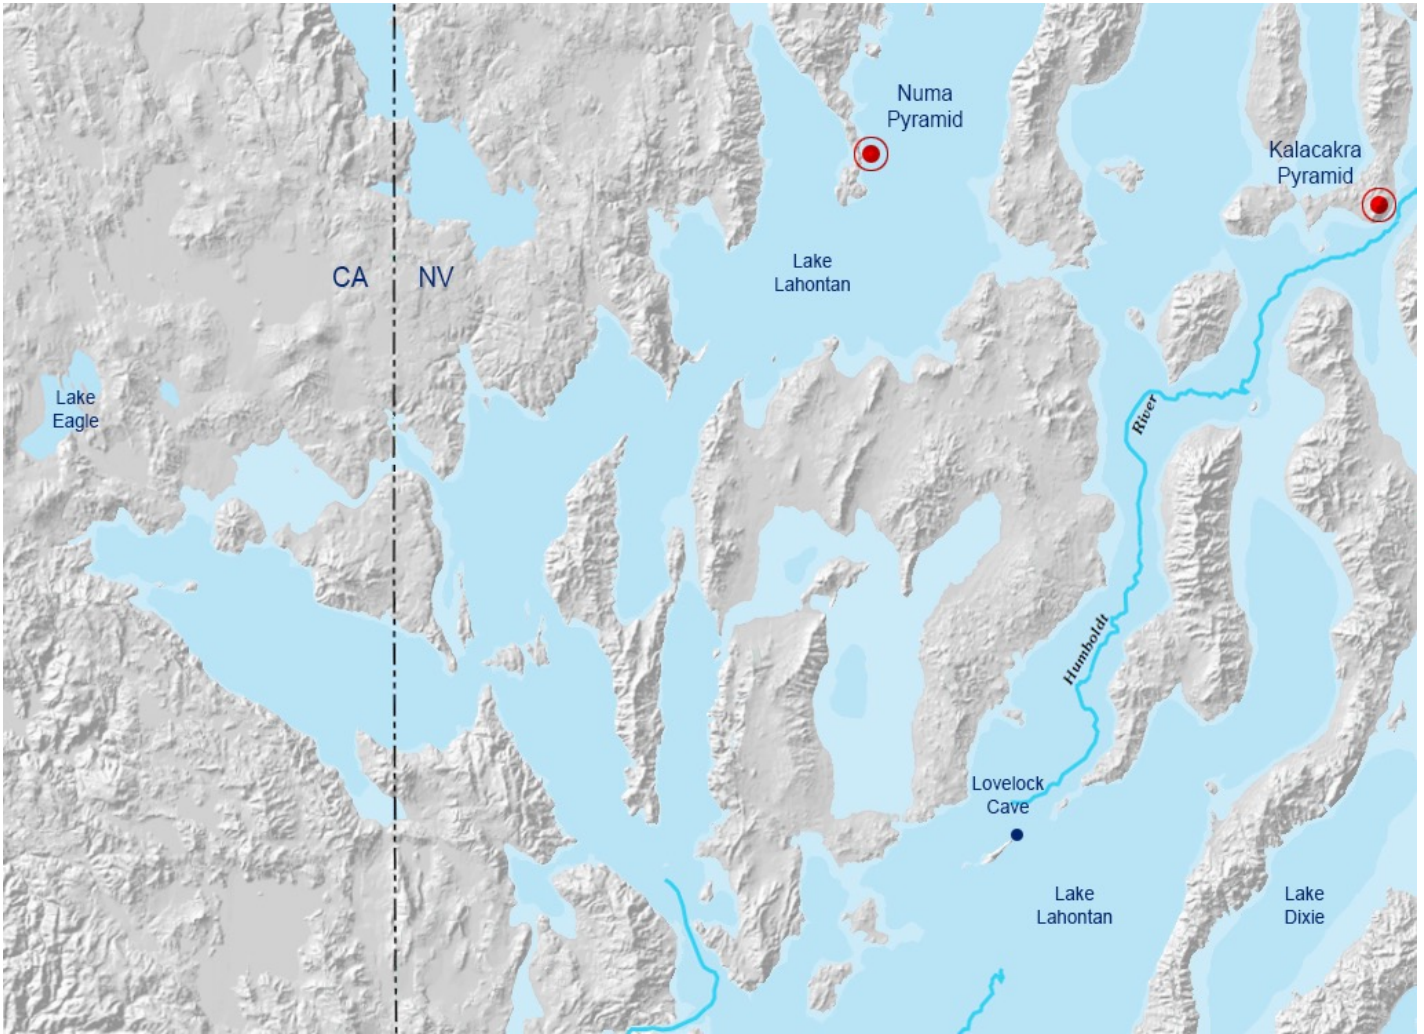

Numa Pyramid in the Black Rock Desert, Nevada (41.090898°N, 118.9140363°W, above) is located 7,181 miles from the Great Pyramid of Giza, Egypt; comprising 28.85% of Earth's mean circumference ($\frac{36}{125}$). Geopositioning near 41° North latitude, at this resonant distance interval, confers efficient reception of infrasound standing wave resonance focused by the axis-symmetric design of the Orion Pyramid Complex.

The pair of large, conjoined pyramids comprising this Atlantean temple complex originally overlooked a vast glacier-fed lake with a depth of over 500' (142m), known today as Lake Lahontan. The ancient shores of Lake Lahontan provided direct access to the Numa Pyramid Complex, which included a series of quays cast red magnetic geopolymer basalt that ran along the eastern ridgeline for the entire length of the complex.

Numa Pyramid (razed)
Black Rock Desert, Nevada

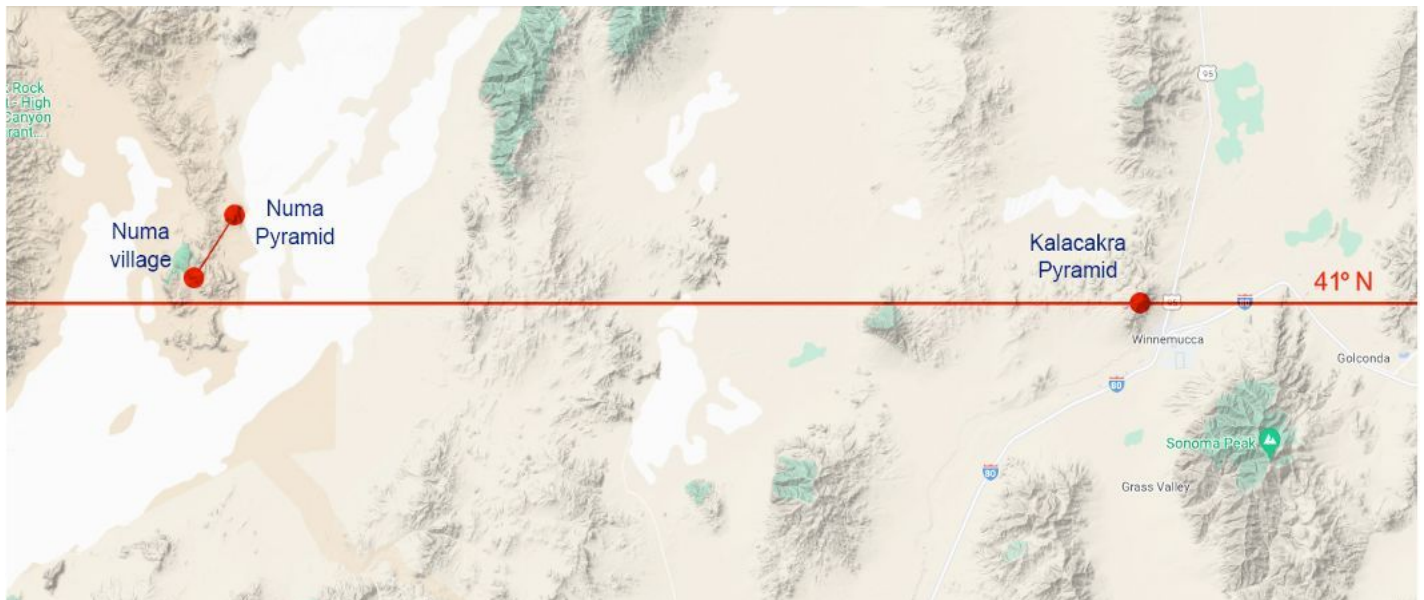

At the base of the cliffs east of Hardin City are outcrops of white loose-grained rhyolitic breccias... The top of the cliff is made up of a fresh, black, lustrous basalt, with clean conchoidal fracture, ringing under the hammer, and of fine, even-grained texture; this has also irregular crevice-like cavities, lined with a botryoidal coating of chalcedony, and in some cases containing a little calcite.²²

Ringing and black coloration of these magnetic basalts reflects relatively high proportions of pyroxene and magnetite crystals. Black dolerite was obtained immediately north of the complex (above). Browne made his way to the southern extension of this Atlantean underground village (41.0393297°N, 118.9690546°W) via lengthy tunnels running more than 10 miles below ground to the southwest of the Numa Pyramid. Use of radioactivity meters will facilitate rediscovery of rubble-filled entrances to this branching tunnel network.

As with the main pyramid group, the Numa Tumulus was once covered with an apex platform and ridgeline walkways cast in black magnetite- and red maghemite-loaded geopolymer basalt megaliths strewn across the site. Close alignment to 41° North latitude is reflected by several other major pyramids associated with underground cities in the western US, as well as off the nation's eastern shores and even in Europe:

Browne's account of the underground village contained two unusual details –glowing radium alloys and the perfectly preserved bodies of a king and queen in royal robes. He recognized tempering of Au-Cu alloys with radium (Ra) endowed spears with great flexibility, yet he did not realize Ra alloys also preserved the bodies.

Public awareness of radium grew immensely in the 1920s. The use of radium healing devices in all forms, including emanators for infusing purified drinking water with colloidal radium and radon gas (above), was banned in the US in the early 1930s –during the time of J.C. Browne's murder. Enforcement of strict medical standards was orchestrated by the Rockefeller pharmaceutical industry monopoly of US government policy.

When asked during a health reading if salt water was beneficial, Edgar Cayce answered that the "sand that carries gold and radium and salt" was the most beneficial. Cayce often recommended the drinking of radium infused water, as well as application of a healing pad called the 'Radium Appliance' to specific areas of the body for enhancing the circulatory system, cleansing the blood and restoring balance to various organs:

In addition to radium-containing health care products popularized by the Health Readings of Edgar Cayce, many other products were marketed and sold by companies with far more dubious claims being attached to highly questionable products, such as radium-containing cigarettes, chewing tobacco and chewing gum. In retrospect, these corporate maneuvers appear specifically designed by the pharmaceutical industry to actively create hazardous products that could then be used to justify the banning of all radium-containing products.

The blatant Illuminati product design of radium cigarette packaging, displaying a pyramid logo in front of a radiating sun, underscores the fact that the efficacy of the Cayce radium treatments represented a major threat to the global control system of the Rockefeller pharmaceutical industry. Today, radium is the most expensive metal in the world listed at ~$100,000 per gram, and cannot be purchased by the general public.

The same modus operandi has been applied to many healthcare products that the pharmaceutical industry would prefer to ban. Natural tobacco and marijuana products certainly fall into this category, exhibiting many beneficial effects including enhancement of cerebral neurogenesis and hemispheric synchronization, while simultaneously increasing production of glutathione, thereby up-regulating many other anti-oxidants for significant immunological benefit. Billions of dollars have been spent in the campaign to ban herbal remedies.

The Radium Appliance was a flexible cloth pad usually containing radium-rich sand or crushed ores that was often prescribed Cayce for clients during health readings. Other medical inventions inspired by the Cayce readings include the Wet Cell Appliance bioelectrical feedback device; the Violet Ray device offering combined UVA and electrical treatments; and the Radium Emanator for infusing drinking water with radium decay byproducts (i.e. radon gas, helium α -particles, γ -rays and β^- electron emissions).

All of these healing devices were banned during overt medical clamp-downs of the 1930s during the Great Depression and its aftermath, which was purposefully initiated with the stock market crash of 1929. That event was specifically orchestrated to prevent public dissemination and eventual mass production of the Tesla Gravity Motor that was also developed with the aid of trance readings given by Edgar Cayce through the 1920s. Cayce described the many health benefits received from the Radium Appliance and radium water:

Properties as to revitalize the blood and the nerve system will be found in that known as the Radium Appliance, which may be obtained from the Radium Appliance Company, Bradbury Building, Los Angeles, California. Wear the double X pad across the solar plexus region and recharge the pad in light or sunshine at least once each day. (Reading 81-2)

Keep the intestinal tract empty, especially in the colon, by using high enemas, that will relieve and remove all the destructive forces as are shown in accumulations there. This will bring relief to many of those conditions through the system, and with the application of the Radium Appliance forces there will be found the correction of the blood, and in building the blood stream, the rebuilding to tissue that has been attacked throughout the system. Do that. (Reading 3890-1)

Q: Are there any physical ailments in connection with this body?

A: There are those conditions that disturb the body, as with that of the locomotory forces and those centers from which these give their incentives to the general system. These, as we find, would be best aided by the use of that of Radium Water –as is made in New York– see? That is, the water is treated by the active forces from same.

This taken in a regular course would be most effective for this body. This aiding in the general debilitation as has come from much medication in various directions for the conditions in liver, spleen, and those of the organs as are affected by debilitated forces.

Q: How should this Radium Water be taken? A: Drank! (Reading 3861-1)

Then, that which may add the better condition to the body would be, taking those small properties as in that of the Radium Water, and with the application over the system (especially in those ganglia that give distress in system) that of the Violet Ray. The Radium Water should not be taken more often than every second or third day. Necessitate being given under the direction of physician, see? (Reading 5721-1)

Radium emanators

Radium water solutions

Q: Is the radium in its present form that the body is taking, correct?

A: This adds as seen, more of those vital forces necessary to produce oxygen or oxidization so that eliminations become nearer normal provided that the activities of the eliminating systems are kept in accord with same. These are best accomplished through the manner of diet and exercise. (Reading 5502-2)

Take internally into the body, every third day, only the one dose of the Radium water. That would give the reaction to the system, with the massaging, to assist in gaining the equilibrium. In this there would be at least twelve doses taken before we would change from this, then it will be necessary to change the portions as taken internally, for this must have the reaction on the tissue that gives radiation throughout the system...

[This enhances] capillary circulation, and the ability of the body to throw off or regulate the heat...and keep the vibration in the body [attuned], you see, [or] in the correct vibration.

Do as we have given here for the next thirty-six days. Radium water, one dose as it comes in one bottle and that given every third day, that only taken internally; then massage to give movement to the system and to reduce the condition as produced by taxation at present. (Reading 4173-2)

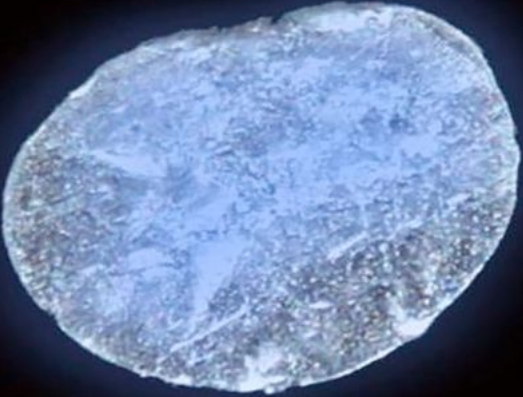

These, as we find, are reflexes and pick up sympathetically the condition in the body, so that their reaction then causes the contraction, or the inability of the body to function normally through the action of nerves that govern the muscular forces or the extremities. The circulation, that is the blood supply, –is not wholly cut off from this portion of the body by this condition, yet is impaired in its action through the system...

To assist, or to give a renewing of the necessary elements in the body, to bring a normal functioning of the body throughout, would be to give those properties that would rebuild or rejuvenate these centers, and that would act on all of the glands to affect more secretions in the system necessary to supply the functioning organs to all parts of the system, and with those create a vibration properly attuned to those of the body.

We would find this in these; each third day we would give radium water in this system, and chloride of gold in the system, with soda, just before treatment was given to the body, –that is the extremities especially, and along the upper dorsal and cervical region, with violet ray, which is to produce heat and vibration to the system. The gold would be 15 grains chloride of gold, to 15 ounces of water, with 8 grains of bicarbonate of soda. A dose would be 8 drops in half a glass of water 30 minutes before the violet ray treatment for 3 to 4 minutes over this portion of the body. The third day take the radium water here you see? (Reading 4601-1)

While the many health applications of radioactive radium products prescribed by Edgar Cayce during health readings were never identified as Ayurvedic medicines of the Atlantean high civilization, a Life Reading on September 10, 1936 directly references use of radium in Taoi during the Atlantean Period (Reading 877-10):

Flax, cotton, ramie, silk and such properties were in active use; as were workers in the metals –gold, silver, lead, radium. All these had been and were in use by those peoples under these environs, when the entity entered into the experience –a period that collaborated or made for what would be called collaboration of the teachings of Saneid, Ra-Ta, Og, and the remnants of the Atlantean experience.

The entity, Muzuen –or son of Mu, was the Prince that grew under those influences for the leadership, the directing of those peoples in the experience, as the Prince of [Taoi, now called] the [Gobi] land... [overseeing] the building of the temple of gold, or overlaid –its beams, its walls, its panelings with many colored, polished woods...

Special radionucleotide remedies prescribed by Edgar Cayce replicate highly advanced Ayurvedic practices of the Atlantean high civilization, as implied by past life information regarding Atlantean mining of gold and radium. Certainly, the Cayce readings provide direct support for subterranean discoveries of J.C. Browne.

Widespread public knowledge concerning the health benefits of radium popularized by Cayce in the late 1920's allowed Browne to correctly identify the source of the unusual red illumination of gold-copper-radium alloys lining the chamber walls of the underground city he discovered below the Black Rock Desert.

Browne described 3 statues glowing much more brightly than the other ancient works of the same rose gold alloy, due to their possessing higher radium content than the other works. Gold-copper-radium (Au-Cu-Ra) ternary alloys were especially manufactured by the Atlanteans for generating red photons for qi meridian healing practices by excitation by γ -rays, charged α -particles and electron streams from β^- decay emission.

A chart presents radium decay chain reactions with decay periods of dominant cascade dynamics (above). The instability of heavy elements like radium and radon present various isotopes which exhibit radioactivity in the form of alpha and beta⁻ decay processes. Ra²²⁶ decays into Rn²²² and Ra²²⁴ into Rn²²⁰ with the release of positively charged He⁴ α particles exhibiting potent cleansing effects (below). Intense α-particle radiation is accompanied by electron streams from β⁻ decay of various isotopes, offering antibacterial and antiviral benefits associated with bioelectrification, enhancing capillary microcirculation throughout the body.

The radium water treatments of Edgar Cayce display the same advanced Ayurvedic use of radioactive atomic decay demonstrated by Atlantean phonon transfer drinking vessels, exemplified by the Tunguska Chalice of Life, imparting colloidal osmium with β⁺ and β⁻ decay radiations from the surfaces of electrom nanocolloids.

Health benefits received from the synergy of gold and radium were praised by Cayce as the highest form of vibratory medicine, when correctly applied according to Ayurvedic dosages. The complimentary vibrations of these two elements were compared to the spiritual companionship of Amilius and Lilith (Life Reading 364-7):

Q: How is the legend of Lilith connected with the period of Amilius?

A: In the beginning, as was outlined, there was presented that that became as the Sons of God, in that male and female were as one, with those abilities for those changes as were able or capable of being brought about. In the changes that came from those Things, as were of the projections of the abilities of those entities to project, this as a being came as the companion; and when there was that turning to the within, through the forces of Creation, as to make for the help to meet that as created by... the Creative Forces that brought into being that as was made, then –from out of self– was brought that as was to be the help meet, not just companion of the body.

Hence the legend of the associations of the body during that period before there was brought into being the last of the creations, which was not of that that was not made, but the first of that that was made, and a helpmeet to the body, that there might be no change in the relationship of the Sons of God with those relationships of the sons and daughters of men.

In this then, also comes that as is held by many who have reached especially to that understanding of how necessary, then, becomes the proper mating of those souls that may be the answers one to another of that that may bring, through that association, that companionship, into being that that may be the more helpful, more sustaining, more the well-rounded life or experience of those that are a portion one of another. Do not misinterpret, but knowing that all are of one –yet there are those divisions that make for a closer union, when there are the proper relationships brought about. As an illustration, in this:

In the material world we find there is in the mineral kingdom those elements that are of the nature as to form a closer union one with another, and make as for compounds –as make for elements that act more in unison with, or against, other forms of activity in the experience in the Earth's environ, or the Earth's force, as makes for those active forces in the elements that are about the Earth.

Such as we may find in those that make for the active forces in that of uranium, and that of ultramarine, and these make then for an element that becomes the more active force as with the abilities for the rates of emanation as may be thrown off from same. So, as illustrated in the union, then, of –in the physical compounds– that as may vibrate, or make for emanations in the activities of their mental and spiritual, and material, or physical forces, as may make for a greater activity in this earth environ. Then, there may be seen that as is in an elemental, or compound, that makes for that as is seen in the material experience as to become an antipathy for other elements that are as equally necessary in the experience of man's environ as in the combination of gases as may produce whenever combined that called water, and its antipathy for the elements in combustion is easily seen or known in man's experience.

So in those unions of that in the elemental forces of creative energies that take on the form of man, either in that of man or woman, with its natural or elemental, see? Elemental forces of its vibration, with the union of two that vibrate or respond to those vibrations in self, create for that ideal that becomes as... radium, with its fast emittal vibrations... gives off that which is ever good –unless abused, see?

So in that may there be basis for those forces, as has been, as is sought, thought, or attained by those who have, through the abilities of the vibrations, to make for a continued force in self as to meet, know, see, feel, understand, those sources from which such begets that of its kind, or as those that become as an antipathy for another, or as makes for those that makes for the variations in the tempering of the various elements [with radium], [for luminous] compounds [or Au-Cu-Ra alloys], or the like; so, as is seen, these –then– the basis for those things as has been given here, there, in their various ways and manners, as to the companion of, and companions of, that first able –through its projection of itself and its abilities in the Creation– to bring about that that was either of its own making, or creation, or that given in the beginning to be the force through which there might be that that would bring ever blessings, good, right, and love, in even the physical or material world. See?

Edgar Cayce's long-winded explanations of ethereal concepts are entirely lost on the average listener, yet must be given thorough consideration to grasp their meaning –and it is well worth the mental effort. Without having any knowledge of the intense radioactivity of the element radium, one could easily overlook these odd statements as incomprehensible. The discoveries of J.C. Browne provide context for Cayce's explanations.

Cayce's lengthy reply regarding Lilith and Amilius draws a powerful comparison between the spiritual affinity of paired, complimentary souls convening for experiences on the Earth plane with the tempering of metals for application of quantum healing radiations –such as gold and copper with radium (Au-Cu-Ra alloys). These special insights from the Akashic Source speaking through Cayce present an encrypted explanation for the combined application of radium water with gold chloride, whereby excited gold atoms produce red photons.

Regular drinking of radium water was widely used among temple practitioners on every continent of the world during the Atlantean period of high civilization. Among later cultures, this tradition was only prevalent among the royal houses in many lands, where access to knowledge of the use of underground sites was tightly controlled. Dissemination of Paleo-Sanskrit knowledge pertaining to the uses of these metals has been highlighted by spectacular finds made by German archeologists in Iraq, reported on April 29, 2003:

Archaeologists in Iraq believe they may have found the lost tomb of King Gilgamesh – the subject of the oldest “book” in history. ‘The Epic Of Gilgamesh’ –written by a Middle Eastern scholar 2,500 years before the birth of Christ– commemorated the life of the ruler of the city of Uruk, from which Iraq gets its name. Now, a German-led expedition has discovered what is thought to be the entire city of Uruk –including, where the Euphrates once flowed, the last resting place of its famous King.

“I don’t want to say definitely it was the grave of King Gilgamesh, but it looks very similar to that described in the epic,” Jorg Fassbinder, of the Bavarian department of Historical Monuments in Munich... In the book –actually a set of inscribed clay tablets– Gilgamesh was described as having been buried under the Euphrates, in a tomb apparently constructed when the waters of the ancient river parted following his death.

“We found just outside the city an area in the middle of the former [course of the] Euphrates River the remains of such a building which could be interpreted as a burial,” Mr. Fassbinder said. He said the amazing discovery of the ancient city under the Iraqi desert had been made possible by modern technology. “By differences in magnetisation in the soil, you can look into the ground,” Mr. Fassbinder added. “The difference between mud bricks and sediments in the Euphrates River gives a very detailed structure.” This creates a magnetogram, which is then digitally mapped, effectively giving a town plan of Uruk.

“The most surprising thing was that we found structures already described by Gilgamesh,” Mr. Fassbinder stated. “We covered more than 100 hectares. We have found garden structures and field structures as described in the epic, and we found Babylonian houses.” But he said the most astonishing find was an incredibly sophisticated system of canals. “Very clearly, we can see in the canals some structures showing that flooding destroyed some houses, which means it was a highly developed system. “[It was] like Venice in the desert.”²⁴

Detailed ground magnetization data recorded by the team could be accurately interpreted according to the general description of the Tomb of Gilgamesh that was translated from cuneiform tablets relating his death:

The herald made the horn signal sound in all the lands: "Unug, arise! Open up the Euphrates! Kulaba, arise! Divert the waters of the Euphrates!" Unug's levy was a flood, Kulaba's levy was a clouded sky. Meanwhile not even the first month had passed, it was not five or ten days before they had opened up the Euphrates and diverted its high water. Utu looked at its shells with admiration. Then as soon as the water in the bed of the Euphrates had receded, his tomb was built there from stone. Its walls were built from stone. Its door leaves were installed in the sockets of the entrance. Its bolt and thresholds were hard stone. Its door-pivots were hard stone.²⁵

The Tomb of Gilgamesh. King of Uruk, located in present-day Warka, Iraq (31.32356°N, 45.63554°E, above), is 868 miles from the Great Pyramid. This resonant distance interval corresponds to 3.49% of Earth's mean circumference (l_{200}), enabling efficient reception of infrasound standing wave resonance.

While the advent of advanced remote sensing magnetogrammetry allowed a highly accurate assessment of the ancient tomb site, the archeological excavations would require much more patience on their part. Excavation of the site believed to be the Tomb of Gilgamesh began soon after, yet had to be temporarily halted due to the unpredictable escalation of violence in the surrounding areas. Excavations were resumed by local authorities who were alerted to the great importance of the dig site by major global media attention.

Discovery of the perfectly preserved body of Gilgamesh, King of Sumer was reported in 2013, representing one of the finest archeological discoveries our time (overleaf). The significance of this discovery was quickly recognized. US military units converged on the site to seize the precious archeological find just days after video documentation had been made, and communications pertaining to the discovery were intercepted.

A local newspaper reported on the discovery of the intact tomb of Gilgamesh, and a copy of this first article was placed on the golden mesh covering the large body when it was documented for the first time on video. Excerpts from this video were later published online, showing a magnetic geopolymer basalt resonator box and the perfectly preserved body of Gilgamesh surrounded by golden funerary items.

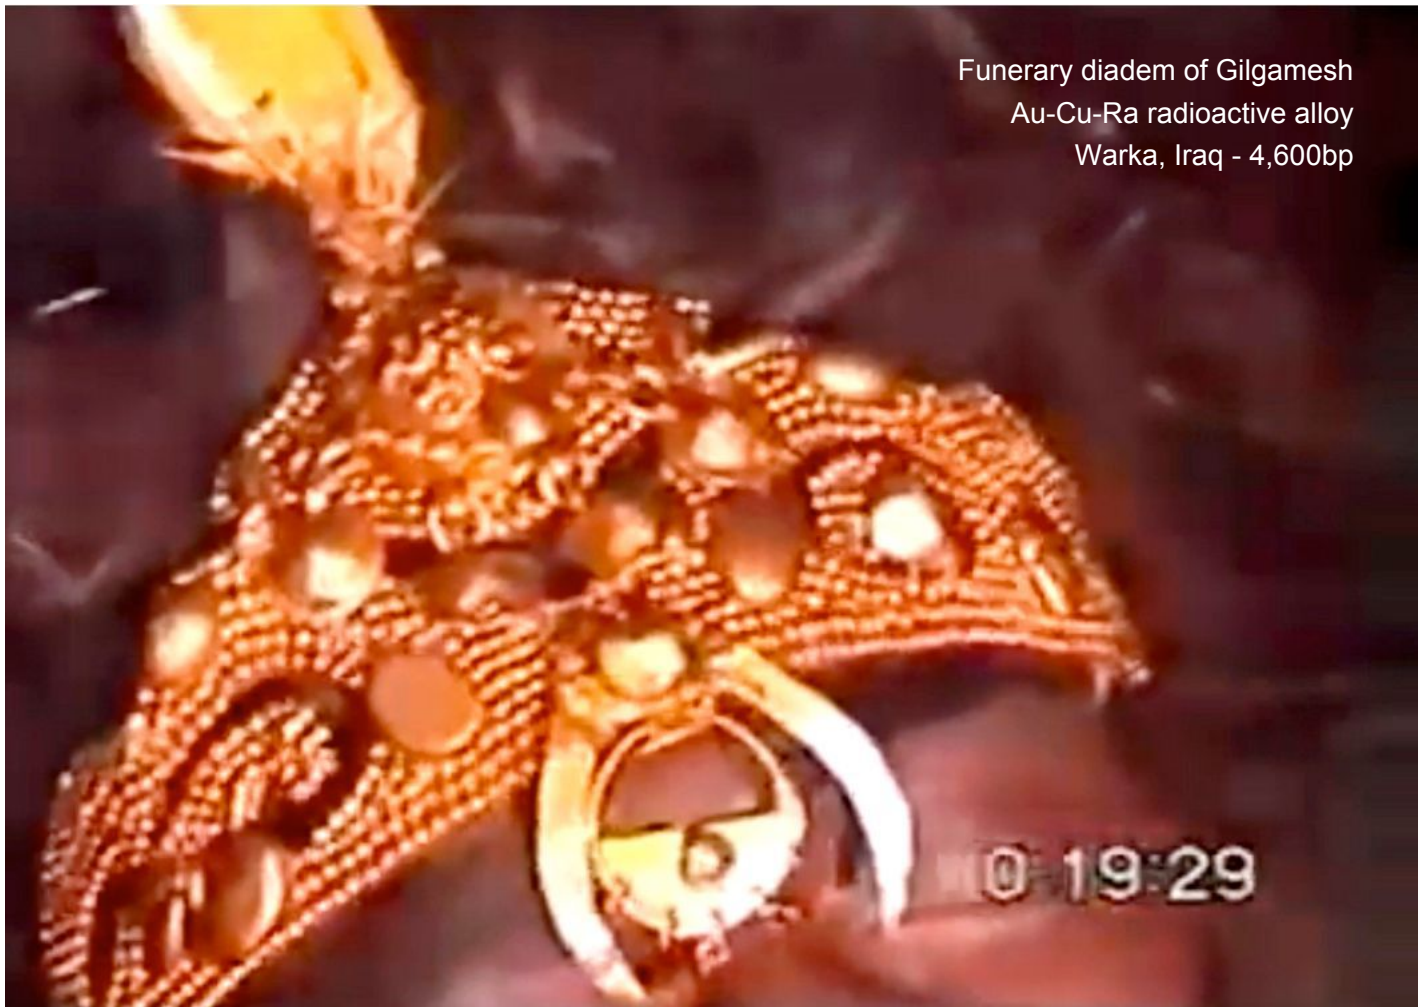

The ~4,600-year-old physical remains of King Gilgamesh cannot be accurately described as a 'mummy', due to the extraordinarily life-like condition of the body. The stunning, authentic video documentation of such ancient remains represents the only footage of its kind, and suggests the possible existence of similar crypts with totally intact physical remains hidden below ground in other tombs utilizing the same special methods.

The Kings of Sumer did not engage in uranium ore mining required for radium refining, yet artifacts of these advanced Au-Cu-Ra alloys were obtained from Atlantean underground sites before being melted down and cast in molds with cuneiform inscriptions as we observe in the resonator box with the body. Placement of fine Au-Cu-Ra funerary items around the body is responsible for its excellent conditions after several millennia.

The many subterranean discoveries reported by J.C. Browne included descriptions of the bodies of giant mummies laid out in rows within the underground chambers, each of them adorned with golden bangles of the same radioactive Au-Cu-Ra alloy comprising glowing statues and mandalas set into the chamber walls.

While Browne's photographs of the giant 8-9' mummies preserved in the Black Rock underground village complex have been confiscated by US government agents, high-resolution documentary video of a closely related archeological discovery has recently been leaked to the public. This authentic video footage presents the tall body of Gilgamesh, King of Sumer in an absolutely perfect state of preservation, lying in a magnetic geopolymer basalt resonator box, wearing golden arm bangles and a diadem on his forehead (below).²⁶

The exquisite state of preservation of the Gilgamesh mummy has caused many viewers to disregard this video evidence as a hoax, yet this archeological find is indeed genuine. The assortment of funerary items entombed with the giant body of Gilgamesh hold the key to understanding how such apparent biological stasis was technologically achieved. The presence of the golden funerary items serves a specific function that cannot be ascertained from video footage –unless a radioactivity dosimeter device is applied.

Gilgamesh is recorded in the Sumerian Kings List as living 129 years before his peaceful death. The remarkable appearance of the body of Gilgamesh corresponds to a middle-aged, muscular man, just as described in Sumerian literature. His age defying physique was enabled by the drinking of radium water on a regular basis throughout his extended lifetime, in conjunction with barefoot practices within temple chambers.

The radium/gold prescriptions of Edgar Cayce and luminous Au-Cu-Ra alloys discovered by J.C. Browne provide compelling scientific evidence implicating the prolonged radioactivity of Ra^{226} as the preservative influence responsible for the pristine preservation of the mummy. Perpetual γ , α and β^- decay radiations emanating from Au-Cu-Ra alloys enhance the effect of radium deposition traces within Gilgamesh's body from drinking radium water at proper dosages throughout his life. Without continual inhalation of radon gas and drinking radium water, a dead body is preserved by the α and β^- decay emanations of Ra^{226} stored in the bones, which slowly diminishes over ensuing millennia according to the isotope's 1,602-year half-life.

Cayce praised the efficacy of radium applications that enabled the full preservation of Gilgamesh: “[R]adium, with its fast emittal vibrations, [represents]... one of the elemental bases from which life in its essence, as an active principle in a material world, has its sources, gives off that which is ever good –unless abused, see?”

Ayurvedic remedies shared by Cayce presented a major threat to the Rockefeller pharmaceutical monopoly, one that was dealt with by serial assassination. Cayce was medically murdered by administration of a sulfate-based drug he had refused on prior occasions due to known complications. He was killed in the same narrow time period as his wife Gertrude Cayce and his associates, inventors Georges Lakhovsky and Nikola Tesla.

The CIA/Nazi industrial takeover of the US was completed during the cover operations of World War II, when construction of a series of secret CIA/Nazi underground bases were established in National Parks throughout the country, housing manufacturing plants for mass-production of Tesla Gravity Motors and radium alloys for stealth antigravity disc craft. Archeological evidence of radium alloys emerged in the 1923 account of miner Fred White, who discovered Au-Cu-Ra alloys at Shin-Au-Av underground city below Death Valley, California:

“Gold spears! Gold shields! Gold statues! Jewelry! Thick gold bands on their arms! I found them! I fell into the underground city. There was an enormous room; big as this canyon. A hundred men were in it. Some were sitting around a polished table that was inlaid with gold and precious stones. Men stood around the walls of the room carrying shields and spears of solid gold...

Thomason explained quietly, “These ancient people must have been having a meeting of their rulers in the council chamber when they were all killed very suddenly. We haven’t examined them very closely because it was the treasure that interested us, but the people all seem to be perfect mummies...”²⁷

White’s description closely matches the applications of funerary alloys surrounding the body of Gilgamesh. Unlike Fred White, J.C. Browne was able to detect the glowing of Au-Cu-Ra alloys and determine their exotic composition, although neither recognized the perfect preservation of the bodies with the alloy’s emanations.

A clandestine government cover-up operation was responsible for the identification and covert destruction of all records pertaining to the ingestion of radium-containing substances that had become widespread from 1905-1931. This Nazi-American information control campaign was exposed by Dr. Samuel D. Clark in his disconcerting 1958 journal publication ‘Where Are the Cases of Radium Poisoning? A Plea for Assistance’:

How many know that there are alive today a large number of persons who have been harboring radioactive substances within their systems for over 30 years, a full generation? These persons are generally referred to as having cases of radium poisoning –internal deposits of radium... Some painted watch dials, some drank ‘Radithor,’ and others had injections of radium chloride, a type of accepted therapy in 1927. Most doctors and laymen alike assume that these persons have all been dead for years. This is far from the case.

While some were injured, we are reasonably certain that about 2,000 luminous dial painters from the early 1920s are still living, most of them in good health. There are probably several hundred who drank radium water or who had injections of radium salts during the period 1915-1930 who are still very much alive today, but, except for a few, we do not know who or where they are. The publicity created by the death of a few was partly responsible for the elimination of the dangers in the use of radium in the more recent years...

A frustrating side of this problem is the near certainty that all the files and records of the early workers in radium have been destroyed by either accident or inadvertence. For example, the records of the investigation by the U.S. Department of Health in 1929 were destroyed in 1944 as a routine measure. The U.S. Public Health Service reported on the hazards of the radium dial painting industry in 1933. All of the detailed information identifying personnel and [industrial] plants producing luminous paints was lost in a flood in 1942. The files of individual investigators, such as those of the late Dr. Frederick B. Flinn of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, have all been destroyed...²⁸

Certainly, Dr. Clark had recognized that the history of medical knowledge pertaining to the use of radium remedies had been entirely eradicated. He realized that a gaping hole existed in radiological data regarding the long-term effects of radium intake; one which required a serious re-examination of the official narrative.

The paucity of available data had convinced Dr. Clark that a medicinal substance of great value was being prohibited by an orchestrated mass media and corporate cover-up of the actual benefits of properly dosed radium water treatments and other radium and radon gas remedies used throughout the late 1920s.

Despite regulatory commission reviews, the longstanding cover-up of the crucial data including medical histories of individuals who took radium treatments remains largely undocumented. It is known that many of the radium dial painters lived beyond 100 years in age –some even having survived into the 2010s.

Exposure to radon gas has become a modern-day hazard in industrial areas of the US and throughout the world wherever uranium ore mining processing is done on a large scale. The spread of leukemia has also become associated with residential communities exposed to environmental radon gas levels far above average. This is exactly the case with the Blackfoot Reservation east of Kiowa, Montana, according to information channeled by Laura Knight-Jadczyk through dialog with the Cassiopaeans on July 16, 1994:

Q: (L) What are you here for tonight? A: Prophecy... Denver Airport Scandal.

Q: (L) What about a Denver airport scandal? A: New airport. Big, big, big, big scandal.

Q: (L) What kind of scandal? A: Government.

Q: (L) Specifically what? A: You will see. Dallas airport is secret base; Orlando too. Miami Too.

Q: (L) What about Denver airport and how does it relate to prophecies?

A: Denver reveals the government. Look for it. Pay attention.

Q: (L) What else do you have to tell us?

A: Montana Experiment with human reproduction. All people there are being exposed to harmful radon gas.

Q: (L) How are they doing this? A: Compelled. Don't trust. Don't ignore. U.S. in sinister plot.

Q: (L) Who is in the plot? A: Consortium.

Q: (L) Who are the members of the consortium? A: All.

Q: (L) All who? A: Government and other.

Q: (L) Who is the other? A: Unknown.

Q: (L) Why can't you tell us who is the other? A: You know who.

This final cryptic statement made by the Cassiopaeans is certainly a reference to giant reptilian humanoids, (previously identified by this author as Homo draconis) controllers behind the Baal consortium of various predatory ET humanoid species of various sizes. The Cs statements concerning nefarious activities taking place at various underground bases implicate many major US airports and Glacier National Park, Montana.

Many surprising predictions issued by the Cs in that 1994 session were echoed in deathbed confessions by a Nazi insider. In 2003, Otto Skorzeny revealed the details of a multi-generational Nazi breeding experiment designed to create a psychopathic slave society far below 'Going To the Sun Road', in Glacier National Park:

According to Skorzeny, the CIA Nazis use stolen Tesla technology to create artificial “antigravity fields” around Glacier National Park, the nearby Blackfoot Indian reservation and many other locations throughout the world. There are hundreds of satellites orbiting the Earth that project high-intensity positively charged laser beams to certain areas on the Earth. The New World Order Nazis use these beams not only as weapons, but also to transmit power to levitating aircraft, flying discs and various other stolen Tesla technologies below. The absorptive properties of the levitating aircraft allow their utilization of energy beamed from orbital plasma generators, optimally transmitted when the stealth aircraft are themselves plasma-cloaked for optical and radar invisibility (giving off only infrared light).

A hazardous by-product of these space-based laser beams is radon gas. Radon is said to be an invisible gas that causes cancer and leukemia in humans and animals, but if you ask the US government about radon gas you will not get a straight answer! Native Americans on the nearby Blackfoot Reservation have suffered from extremely high rates of cancer and leukemia since the 1950s. The US government says that nothing is wrong and there is no reason to be concerned, yet suffering communities must be informed of the true cause of their severe ailments.

Skorzeny claims that the SR-71 Blackbird, B-2 Stealth Bomber planes and antigravity flying discs are constantly hovering just below 200' in the skies above Glacier National Park and the Blackfoot Indian Reservation. This explains why commercial flights are forbidden to fly below 200' in Glacier National Park; and why no one is allowed to bring firearms into the park for protection against the aggressions of the resident grizzly bears.²⁹

Precise technical details offered by Nazi espionage agent Otto Skorzeny to support his astonishing claims are entirely accurate, and confirm radium as a major component of electroluminescent alloys comprising the hulls of CIA/Nazi antigravity disc craft. The invisible presence of HHO plasma-cloaked discs hovering over Glacier National Park perpetuates the dispersal of high radon gas emissions from radium-containing alloys.

Another compelling aspect of Skorzeny's deathbed confession pertains to gravity motor propulsion systems of these craft designed during the 1920s by Nikola Tesla, Edgar Cayce and Thomas Townsend Brown. The invention was suppressed and eventually stolen from the inventor by Otto Skorzeny with Reinhardt Gehlen.

Use of naturally radioactive uranium ores by temple builders reflects advanced Ayurvedic healing principles. 'The Mystery of Blind Frog Ranch' TV series documents debris piles of metallic powders that accumulated over the course of millennia from weather disaggregated geopolymers on the slopes above. These metallic powders contain exotic elements that can be melted into solid metal ingots with very low sand content.

Mystery at Blind Frog Ranch, Season 2, Episode 5 - Radioactive rocks are found at Blind Frog Ranch

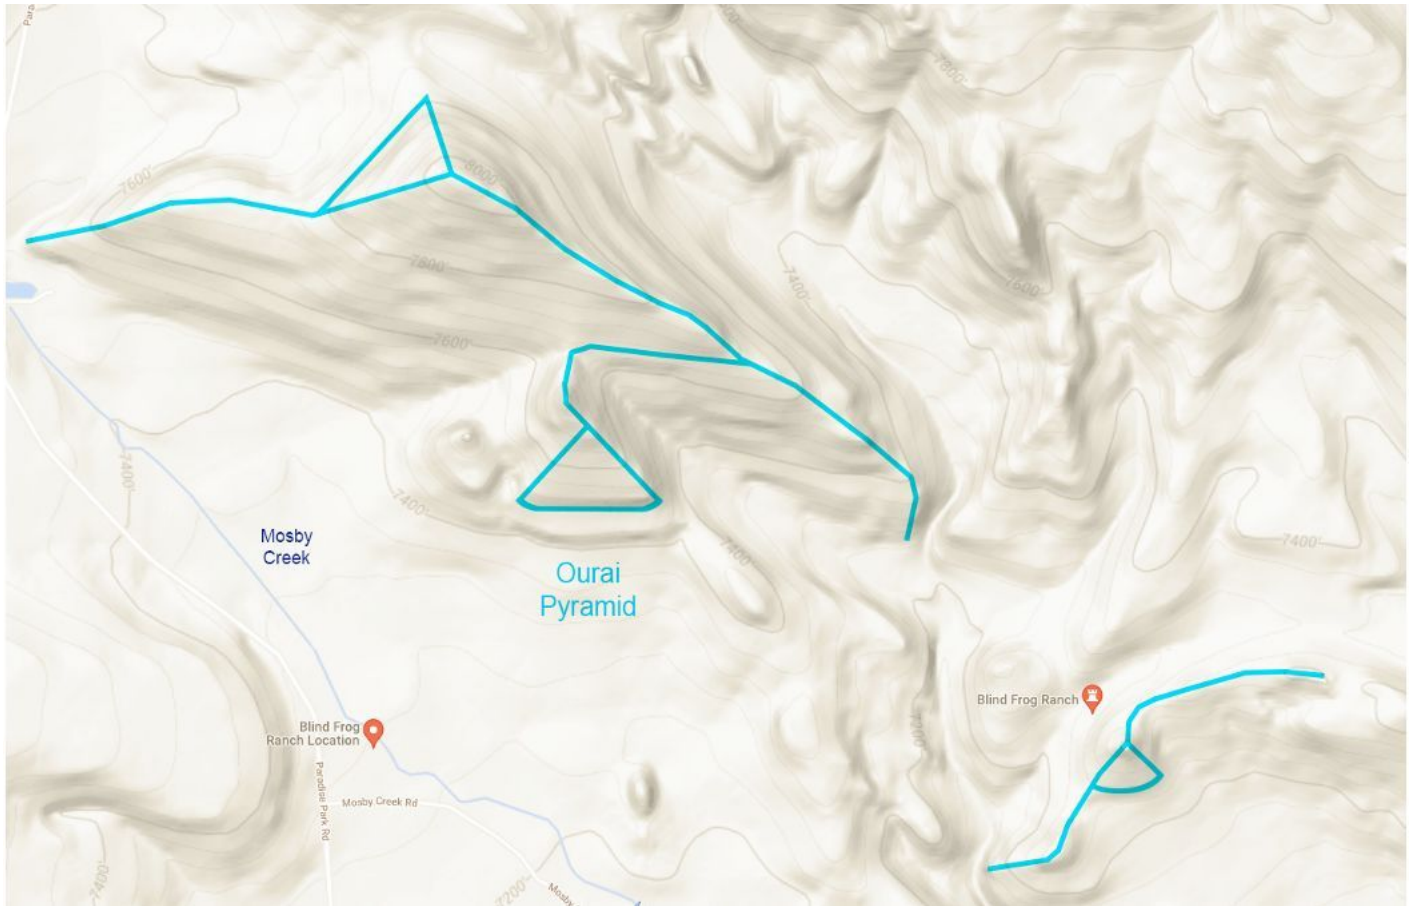

During previous episodes of the show, some artifacts and items have been found including liquid metal, bored rocks and ancient coins. Radioactive rocks were also found... Why are the rocks radioactive? There have been many puzzling discoveries at Blind Frog Ranch in seasons 1 and 2. However, when it comes to the radioactive rocks found, it may be quite a normal occurrence as Utah was an area used for uranium mining in history. Uranium is a radioactive ore that occurs naturally.³⁰

Samples were obtained from an ancient geopolymer pyramid site with metallic particle deposits (40.5579°N, 109.80817°W). XRF scans of powder samples obtained before melting show a rare combination of elements not found together in pure states in nature, rather indicating an ancient technological origin of debris material:

Metal	ppm	wt. %
Pd	228	14
Zn	24	6
Zr	198	5
Pb	7	4
Mo	35	4
Rb	61	3
Sr	55	3
Nb	21	3
Fe	0.19	0.01

The high palladium, zirconium, molybdenum, rubidium, strontium and niobium content of the sample are extraordinary! XRF scanning metal ingots produced from the sample shows the additional presence of silver that was not observed in the sample before melting. Paladium (Pd) possesses a bright blue coloration, with several isotopes above and below those of silver (Ag). Surface atoms of Pd¹¹⁰ and Pd¹⁰⁸ undergo resonant transmutation into Ag¹⁰⁹ and Ag¹⁰⁷ after cooling below the 37.8°C thermoregulation temperature threshold.

Ourai Pyramid, above Blind Frog Ranch at Mosby Creek, Utah (40.56788°N, 109.82067°W, above), is located 6,974 miles from the Great Pyramid of present-day Giza, Egypt. This resonant distance interval corresponds to 28.02% of Earth's mean circumference of 24,892 miles ($\frac{7}{25}$), ensuring efficient reception of infrasound standing wave resonance focused by axis-symmetric structures of the Orion Pyramid Complex.

As observed at nearby 'Skinwalker Ranch', occupation of ancient underground cities by giant predators of the Baal ET consortium is associated with the stench of rotting flesh, left as a warning to any trespasser entering their domain. Rank odors were reported in one section of the Hopi Temple Complex in the Grand Canyon, and in one section of the Numa Pyramid Complex discovered by Browne below the Black Rock Desert.

This nefarious presence must be eradicated from Earth before the ancient temple network can be rededicated to God, as described long ago by the Nazarene One and recorded faithfully in 'The Essene Gospel of Peace':

"Happy is he who can enter into the kingdom of God, for he shall never see death...Happy are those who persevere to the end, for they shall inherit the Earth... Then Jesus went to them and said: "You suffer, for Satan and his diseases torment your body. Fear not, for their power over you will quickly end... I tell you truly, even so did Satan enter your bodies which are the habitation of God. And he took in his power all that he wished to steal: your breath, your blood, your bone, your flesh, your bowels, your eyes, and your ears. But by your fasting and your prayer, you have called back the lord of your body and his angels.

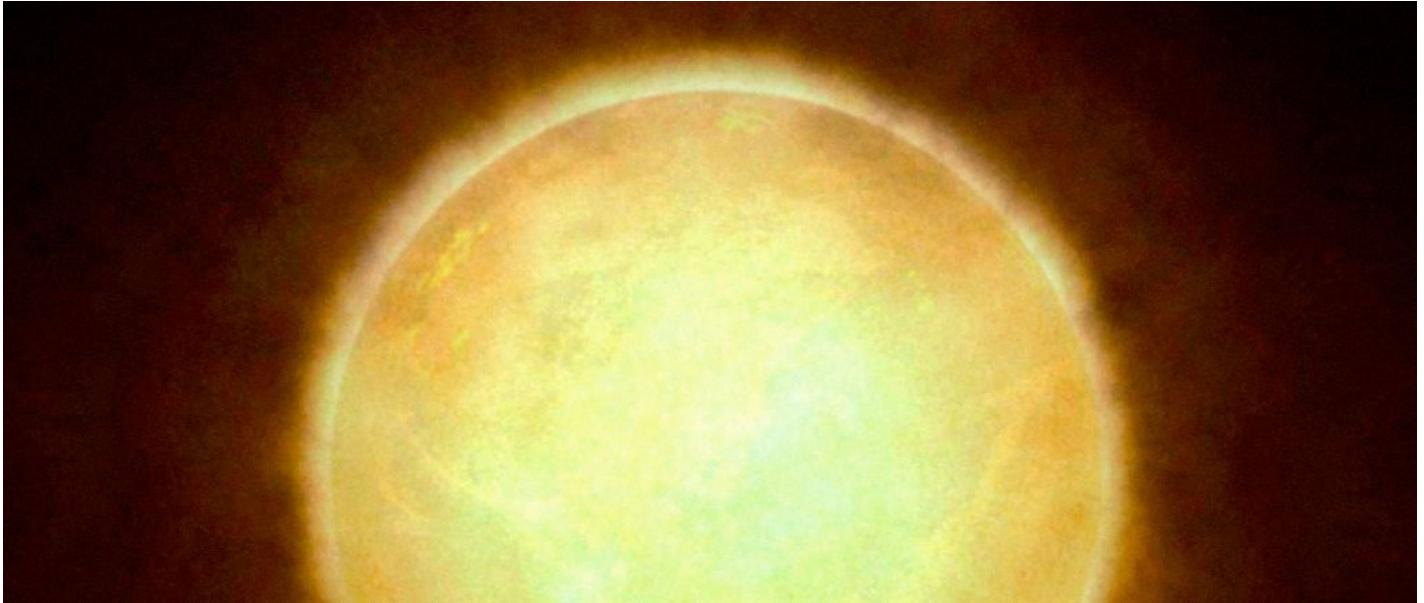

And now Satan sees that the true lord of your body returns, and that it is the end of his power. Wherefore, in his wrath he gathers his strength once again. That he may destroy your bodies before the coming of the lord. It is for this that Satan torments you so grievously, for he feels that the end is come. But let not your hearts tremble, for soon will the Angels of God appear, to occupy again their abodes and rededicate them as temples of God. And they will seize Satan and cast him from your bodies with all his diseases and all his uncleannesses.³¹ And happy will you be, for you will receive the reward for your steadfastness, and you will never see disease.

Master Jesinavarah gave essential information regarding future events pertaining to His return after the shift has occurred, when great throngs of ET races will converge on planet Earth to witness and participate in the ascension of Earth to a 4th-density realm: "But let not your hearts tremble, for soon will the Angels of God appear, to occupy again their abodes and rededicate them as temples of God." Identification of Atlantean underground city complexes represents the first step in this process of bringing these temples into the light.

Recognition of Atlantean Ayurvedic medicines and funerary practices involving the use of gold-copper-radium alloys provides key data supporting the 1987 ET contact case of Michel Desmarquet, a French man living in Australia who was invited on a cosmic journey that culminated in a visit to the Golden Planet of Thiaoouba.

Advancement of transdimensional space travel technologies is inextricably linked with the development of electroluminescent, radium-containing alloys and the control of cellular aging enabled by the mastery of biorhythmic resonance using Soma elixirs; electrum and radium water regeneration techniques. Thao explained to Michel that all the inhabitants of the Golden Planet enjoy perpetual physical regeneration:

‘The physical body is merely a vehicle which, in most cases we abandon when we die...By this, I mean that some of us, including all on our planet, are able to regenerate the cells of our bodies at will [thereby granting limitless lifespans]. Yes, you have already noticed that most of us seem to be of the same age. We are one of three planets that are the most highly evolved in this galaxy. Some of us can, and do, directly join what we call the great ether. So, on this particular planet, we have arrived at a stage near perfection, both materially and spiritually.’³²

The perfection of knowledge attained by the Masters of Thiaoouba places their existence beyond the reach of death, enjoying perpetual regeneration until transcending physicality as 6th-density thoughtforms. The life-like appearance of the body of King Gilgamesh closely replicates conditions maintained in the Golden Doko:

I could see about 200 people floating in the air with no help from any apparatus. The bodies seemed to be asleep or in deep meditation... ‘What are they doing? Are they meditating?’ I whispered to Thao who was at my side...

‘They are dead. These are corpses... Some of them have been here for thousands of years and the most recent, I believe, has been here for sixty years’... Without exception, they were entirely naked... The eyes and mouths of all these people were closed, and they all occupied one of two positions –either sitting in the lotus position, or lying on their backs with their arms by their sides.

Exquisite preservation of the deceased humanoid bodies suspended in the Golden Doko is achieved by infusion of gold, silver and radium nanocolloids into the mist-covered lake below the majestic HHO plasma dome, conferring the lustrous radiance and perpetual stasis of the many floating corpses.

The visible luminosity emanating from the eyes and bodies of the Masters of Thiaoouba and their emissary to Earth –Master Aarioc who taught as Jesinavarah of Nazareth– is conferred by the presence of gold, silver and radium nanoparticles dispersed throughout their bodies. Surely, this fact explains the exact means by which the blood of Christ has been preserved to the present day through preservatory nuclear emanations.

This fact also explains why UFO encounters involving ET entities or spacecraft sightings at close proximity to witnesses usually provokes radiation exposure burns or metering of high radiation levels at the exact sites of interaction. The drinking of electrum and radium nanocolloids appears to be a common practice among all highly advanced, space-faring civilizations throughout the cosmos. Restoration of Ayurvedic knowledge of regenerative applications of Soma elixir and gold-copper-radium alloys represents a definitive stage in the evolution of consciousness, driving technological advancement of humanoid species throughout the cosmos.
