Nordic Bloodlines

Nordic Bloodlines

There has been a gradual consensus forming among researchers in the related scientific fields of quantum mechanics, anthropology and human genetics, which affirms the transcendent spiritual wisdom of ancient indigenous cultures in every part of the world. Quantum cosmology recognizes the reality of many worlds suspended in multiple dimensions of a singular field, reflecting ancient Sanskrit knowledge of chittakash: a perpetual 'blinking' of all materiality –cycling 'on' and 'off'; from solid matter to a unified nonphysical state.

Paleo-Sanskrit physicists directed their attention towards the inner psychic form of communication that takes place during sleep and in the depths of meditation. They elicited the powerful atomic influences of neutrino- and  $\gamma$ -ray-emitting beverages to enhance reception of psychic messages from the Higher Self.

The Higher Self of each individual is a future incarnation of that same person, living simultaneously on an exoplanet of a higher level, in a body commensurate to that higher level planet. According to our common perspective, each individual's Higher Self is an ET humanoid inhabiting another world –who provides key spiritual counsel by mental projection from within the fluid workings of our own thoughts. In fact, physical encounters with ET humanoids may actually be encounters with the Higher Self; with a future incarnation.

Many cases of UFO sightings have been reported which first appear to be chance encounters with no immediate significance, yet prove their importance at a much later date. Such is the case with a brief UFO sighting that occurred on a farm in Ranton, a small town near Stafford, England.<sup>1</sup> On October 31, 1954 Mrs. Jessie Roestenberg reported seeing a domed UFO with a large viewing window, through which she could see two male ET occupants operating the controls of the spacecraft (illustrated above).<sup>2</sup>

Jessie was 29 years old at the time of the event, which changed her perception of reality in an instant. She was standing in the back yard with her two sons at their family farm in Ranton, when they witnessed a bright light slowly descend from high in the sky to hover directly over the stunned onlookers. They froze in a state of silent shock for the short duration of the event, before it flew off and they ran inside the house.

A simple sketch drawn by eyewitness Mrs. Jessie Roestenberg shows the structure of two conical domes with a viewing window, set into an annular ring housing an array of gravity motors (at left). The two occupants of the craft were seen seated at a viewing window, with their heads covered by transparent helmets set into a mounting ring fixed to the shoulder pads of their one-piece flight suits.

The special waveform design of the spacecraft is revealed by cross-section overlay of the nonlinear structure of standing wave resonance generated by photonic quasicrystal alloys of the hull (above). Conformation of the spaceship's design to this essential waveform pattern relates to its function as a quantum gravity-control device, effectively increasing energy coherence within the system.

The UFO encounter report given by Mrs. Roestenberg stands out from most accounts in several important respects. Her sighting conforms to a pattern of events associated with a covert, subterranean ET base of operations located 76 miles (122 km) northwest of the encounter site near Raton, in Staffordshire. This same determination was made long ago by UK and US government projects, involving the coordination of reconnaissance platforms for analysis of airspace/UFO traffic monitoring data over extended time periods.

These painstaking methods not only reveal the relationship of unknown aerial traffic to and from the sites of underground bases, but also gives significant insight into long-term patterns of covert activity relating to any movements of hyperdimensional spacecraft made according to a flight schedule that can be predicted.

The airspace over Snowdonia is among the primary targets of IR satellite observation for UFO activity monitoring in the UK, where diverse types of ET spacecraft are recorded passing right through the surface rock strata to access the gigantic aircraft hangars of a vast subterranean complex that lies far below.

The remains of ancient temple foundations are connected by series of long, curved ridgeline walkways rising from the northwest of Carnedd Llewelyn to its peak, before making a broad curve to the west side of the complex (above). Cast geopolymer siltstone and pyritic mudstone formations were razed long ago, with remnants of geometric seamwork visible on Llech Ddu spur at Carnedd Dafydd (cover image, overleaf).

Asgard Temple (razed), at Carneddau Llewelyn and Dafydd, in Wales, UK (53.1605938°N, 3.9704208°W, above), is located 2,381 miles from the Great Pyramid, comprising 9.57% of Earth's mean circumference ( $12/125$ ). This resonant distance ensures efficient standing wave infrasound reception, reflecting the value of Fibonacci #281 ( $2,377.06... \times 10^{-55}$ ) in miles and the value of Fibonacci #59 ( $9.57... \times 10^{-11}$ ) in percent.

The immense scale of ancient geopolymer construction at this site is heavily obscured by destructive aerial warfare of the Baal ET consortium, razing the surface temples of the original complex for the purpose of blocking tunnel entrances with megalithic debris fields. The huge underground complex below Carnedd Llewelyn was recaptured and converted for use by Nordic ETs in the Middle Ages, as well as another base in Canada mentioned by a Nordic ET friend of retired US Army weather observer Charles James Hall:

Many people of Norwegian ancestry, and Scandinavian ancestry have always lived in the Southern Wisconsin area... I asked my friend if... they had come here from Norway. He responded that Southern Norway was where their ship had landed. However, they had moved to Canada to be closer to where he and his family lived. His family lived in southern Ontario, Canada. They didn't live right in a city... [but] out in a heavily forested [area]...

Nordic ET spacecraft occupants
Ranton, England - Oct 31, 1954

I asked him when his people first started coming here to this Earth... He wasn't sure when they first started,... [but] they have been coming here in small groups for a very long time. However, he implied the number of their travelers to Earth increased noticeably back about the time of Charlemagne... [from] the years 750-800AD. The early years were very painful for them. Not every trip was successful because the navigation was very difficult. The landings were very difficult. There was little, if any support once they arrived. The culture here on Earth was barbaric and very primitive. In essence, every group was on their own. Many... were never able to return home.

Even in the 20th century, many of the ships that made it to Earth were off course and had very difficult landings. The west coasts of England or Alaska or Siberia were easily confused with the west coast of Norway... My friend related that after WWII was over, his friends contacted the American Government, and presented their 'Wish List'... [to Dr. Edward Teller, who] was very polite, but turned them down.<sup>3</sup>

The statements of Charles Hall are confirmed by an August 9, 1942 photograph of Nordic ET Valiant Thor (detail below) with a group of 24 top scientists that included Dr. Edward Teller. The photograph belonged to the collection of Dr. Phil Schneider, who had inherited it from his father, Dr. Oscar Schneider. The image represents the first publicly disseminated photo of an ET humanoid individual; nearly 5 years prior to the recording of the ET autopsy video of the grey hybrid pilot extracted from the July, 1947 Roswell UFO crash.

The archival photograph shows Valiant Thor intently listening to Dr. Constantin Yaglou in the briefing room onboard the USS Eldridge, in preparation for the live test that was conducted just 3 days later. The US Navy Operation Rainbow Project was the culmination of 11 years of joint research by Dr. Nikola Tesla and other world-class scientists, utilizing the Tesla gravity motor to achieving HHO plasma invisibility cloaking.

Physiological characteristics of Nordic ET humanoids is so similar to Earth humans that most people would not notice any difference at all. Valiant Thor possesses a great cranial volume than normal humans on Earth, with a thick, muscular neck supporting a subtle cranial augmentation of the occipital lobe (above).

Valiant Thor's muscular shoulders and slightly unusual facial features closely match the color illustration of the two Nordic spacecraft occupants based on Jessie Roestenberg's 1954 eyewitness descriptions. The blonde-haired Nordic ET visitor also displays strong facial similarities and enhanced cranial proportions observed in Etruscan funerary portraits, from ancient sites like the necropolis at Cerveteri, Italy (overleaf).

The exquisitely rendered forms of the figurative funerary representations present very large and beautifully shaped eyes that radiate a child-like joyfulness and intelligence that were wonderfully captured by the sculptor. Identification of lengthy geopolymer trackways and polygonal masonry at the site indicate an underground city below Cerveteri, constructed by the ancient Atlantean high civilization prior to 13,000 bp.

A thorough 2018 assessment of the genetic heritage of Etruscan individuals from two different cemeteries was made in the context of funerary items interred with the body, showing the distinctive origin and culture of the Longobard culture of the Middle Ages in northwestern Europe, especially Wales and England:

The Longobards –also known as the Lombards or "longbeards"– were a polyethnic confederation [that occupied] ... modern Austria and western Hungary... [and] conquered most of Italy in the later 6th century led by their ruler King Albion. Veeramah and colleagues used advanced DNA techniques to sequence genomes of 63 individuals from 2 ancient cemeteries in Szólád, Hungary, and Collegno, Italy,... previously associated with the Longobards...

Each cemetery was found to be organized around one large family, with at least 2 groups differing in ancestry and funeral customs identified at each location. The team's findings demonstrate that the people in these cemeteries were very genetically diverse, with... modern northern or central Europeans, and... modern southern Europeans. This range of diversity was surprising, even for a modern European village, according to Veeramah.

"Even more interestingly, in both cemeteries, individuals with this more northern genetic ancestry tended to have lots of grave goods –weapons, jewelry, etc.– and be buried in a very elaborate way, while those with a more southern ancestry tended to not possess such artifacts," he said. "The northern-looking individuals also seemed to have much better diets in general –lots of meat for example," he said. "This suggests that while these individuals were all part of the same overall community –because they were buried together– there was a social structure that was shown in how they were buried and that reflected different genetic backgrounds."

Finally, the team were able to reconstruct complete genealogies of the people in these ancient cemeteries, Veeramah said. "Intriguingly, we found families of mostly males buried together spanning across three generations, but only involving individuals with the northern European genetic ancestry and rich grave goods."

"Females did not show such close relationships, and showed evidence of being born elsewhere," he said. "We would not have expected to see this kind of northern genetic ancestry in Italy. This leads us to think that we are witnessing the migration of barbarians –in this case the so-called 'Lombard migration'– described in the historical texts, and that groups of closely related males were an important part of this migration process. Women may have been acquired along the way or brought in from elsewhere once the group had settled."<sup>4</sup>

The wealth of genetic information yielded by the 2018 study of Etruscan burials confirms the Lombard migration of groups with Nordic ET hybrid heritage took place during the very same period identified by the Nordic ET friend of Charles Hall in Madison Wisconsin in the 1950s. He had specified the Middle Ages as a colonizing period of Nordic ET humanoids arriving on Earth after mass migrations from their home planet.

These genetic, physiological and historical connections between the Lombards dissemination of Nordic ET genes are directly corroborated by the high degree of cultural sophistication seen in artistic and architectural achievements of the Etruscan civilization, which included the manufacture of synthetic stone and cement.

Clearly, the bearded Etruscan funerary figure reiterates this genetic link to the ‘Longbeard’ migration from ET hybrid populations in England and Wales from the Snowdonia underground Nordic ET base. Unusually shaped eye contours are observed among many models and actors such as Andreas Eriksen (above, left) present an elevated number of Nordic ET genes, despite their darker hair color.

Celebrities with Nordic ET heritage include famous athletes and actors who are often cast as superheroes or supervillains: Tom Brady, Jimmy Garrapolo, Viggo Mortensen, John Travolta, Ben Affleck, Aaron Eckhart Henry Cavill, etc. Prominent examples of female celebrities that display Nordic ET physical traits include Swedish film actresses and fashion models such as Anna Anka, Elsa Hosk, Caroline Winberg and Frida Aasen (above, right), presenting traits typical of members of mtDNA haplogroup U5a. There also appears to be a genetic connection from Atlantean times between the Nordic ET-related U5a haplogroup and the Basque ancestry of present-day northern Spain that developed in an underground complex in that area.

Matara Pyramid, at San Sebastián de Garabandal, is located in the Basque region of northern Spain –as detailed in previous work by this author.<sup>5</sup> Coastal positioning of Nordic ET bases in Wales, Spain and Italy facilitates oceanic transport via sailing ships; Asgard base is just 5 miles from shore, Matara Pyramid city is 11 miles from the shoreline and Cerveteri underground base is just 3 miles from the Mediterranean Sea.

The sites of ancient underground city complexes now occupied by the Nordic ET civilization were specifically built by Atlantean groups in alignment with the global mandala distribution pattern of pyramids and megalithic temples based on the quadratic function  $[z_{n+1} = z_n^2]$  (above). Projection of this topological quantum field mandala from the apex of the Great Pyramid of Giza, Egypt presents nonlinear intervals between these large underground cities seeding cultural development.

Geographic survey of ancient European mtDNA specimens belonging to haplogroup U5a shows the geophysical relationship of ancestry for this group over an extended timespan of >30,000 years (at left)<sup>6</sup>. The specific dating<sup>7</sup> of the oldest specimen in mtDNA haplogroup U5a to an age of ~30,200 places it right at the beginning of the reconstruction period following the catastrophic inundation known today as 'The Great Flood'.

Nordic ET groups have also established major subterranean bases of operation in the ancient Atlantean city complexes at Sylarna Pyramid, below the border of Norway and Sweden; and below Mount Shasta in northern California, USA. Folklore from the Mount Shasta community reveals that, during the period prior to World War II, visitations were made to local shops by Nordic ET humanoid couples wearing white robes.

In the final volume of his 6-book 'Millennial Hospitality' series, Charles Hall discussed an underground base of the Norwegian ETs located in a thickly forested area of southern Ontario, Canada. This location conforms well to the climatic preferences demonstrated by the Nordic ET friend of his aunt, who was seen swimming in frigid waters of Lake Mendota in Madison, Wisconsin.

An investigation of the sacred landscapes and hotspots of anomalous aerial activity in southern Ontario reveals a covert Nordic ET base near the north shore of Lake Superior below Ruby Lake Lookout (above).

Dolomite and dolomitic marble form the natural bedrock strata surrounding Ruby Lake, which was entirely leveled and resurfaced with thick layers of reconstituted geopolymer dolomite cast by Atlantean builders.

The level plateau forming the site of Ruby Lake Lookout presents vast, exposed tracts of geopolymer dolomite pavements that serve as emergency spacecraft landing sites, harboring radioactive debris traces (above). The synthetic stone's exotic composition includes ferromagnetic and paramagnetic particulate metals that transduce incident infrasound waves into a strong EM field on the plateau that is apparently responsible for the significant extent of bare patches where the overgrowth has been unable to take hold.

Nordic ET spacecraft regularly enter the expansive subterranean complex through the waters of Ruby Lake itself, to gain access to the grand system of deep underground hangars housing fleets of spacecraft of various sizes, shapes and configurations that can occasionally be observed in the skies overhead.

Nordic ET base below Ruby Lake Lookout, Canada (48.987481°N, 88.1860892°W, above) is located 5,840 miles from the Great Pyramid, comprising 23.46% of Earth's mean circumference ( $^{47}/_{200}$ ). Exact placement at 49° North latitude also maximizes reception of infrasound standing wave resonance, reflecting the value of Fibonacci #369 (5,847.28... x 10<sup>-73</sup>) in miles and the value of Fibonacci #80 (23.41... x 10<sup>-15</sup>) in percent.

Enhanced EM conditions generated by the artificial stonework of the plateau can be readily measured using ULF microphones and Tri-Field EMF meters during solar flares. Aerial traffic above the Nordic ET base accounts for UFO sightings over the communities of Red Rock and Nipigon, Ontario. This reality is directly supported by the statements of Charles Hall, who was informed by a male Nordic ET in Madison Wisconsin that his people maintained an underground base in a heavily forested area in southern Ontario.<sup>8</sup>

While flying just north of Thunder Bay in 1987, the pilot of a Canadian Airlines International 737 reported the airplane's radar picked up the fuselage of an object he approximated to be six times larger than a 747, traveling at 8,200 km/h. Unfortunately, the object was some 80 km away, too far for a visual sighting.<sup>9</sup> The area has been known for decades as a UFO hotspot, with residents reporting spacecraft of all varieties.

The subterranean Nordic ET base below Ruby Lake is located just 68 miles from a Baal ET base below La Pate Nature Reserve on Pie Island, in the Thunder Bay region of Lake Superior, Ontario (below). An online compendium of UFO reports from the Thunder Bay-Red Rock area includes events from the early 1900s:

September 18, 1914 - Fort William, Ontario (Times Journal): A cemetery caretaker observed an airship with a bright searchlight maneuvering in the air nearby. He first awoke to the sound of whirring machinery and saw the airship heading north from the range of hills beyond Mount McKay, as the searchlight flashed all over the country. The glowing craft then headed southwest to Kakabeka Falls after approximately 20 minutes of observation.

1948 - Red Rock / Nipigon: A young person and their neighbor in Nipigon had taken 8 pictures of a UFO that hovered over Red Rock and the Bald Spot. The bottom of the craft was saucer-shaped and the top resembled an upside-down cup. There were circular black windows all around the part of the cup above where it met with the lower portion of the hull. The neighbor's son stated the RCMP confiscated the photos and negatives the next day.

November 23, 1953 - Above Lake Superior: Air Defense Command tracked an unidentified target by radar over the lake. An F-89C jet interceptor took off from Kinross AFB in pursuit. The aircraft closed in on the object until radar observers witnessed the two objects merge at the moment that radio communications from the interceptor aircraft were abruptly cut off. The pilot, the radar operator and the airplane were never seen again.<sup>10</sup>

August, 1960 - Atikokan, Ontario (PsiCan): A couple picking berries at Duckbill Lake heard a low-pitched humming sound, climb a hill to see a green circular object near the lake with 4 dwarfs with hosepipes attached to their suits, syphoning water from the lake. One witness screamed. The beings entered the object, which took off.

1960s - Red Rock, Ontario (Chronicle Journal): The witness was sitting on his couch when he was suddenly dragged toward the window of his house by a beam of green light emitted from the craft hovering outside his window. He saved himself by hanging onto the couch until the beam dissipated and the craft departed.

June 30, 1966 - Thunder Bay (Chronicle Journal): A family on a fishing trip at at Onion Lake were staying in a camper in a gravel pit, when intermittent grinding noises were heard after 11pm. They noticed the odor of 'carborundum rubbing on steel', and then noticed their son was missing. They called for him and began to search in the darkness. Their son wandered back to the camper after 15 minutes and was very agitated. He said he had seen a plane, saucer-shaped, and went towards it. He didn't remember anything that followed.

After having some ignition problems, their truck eventually started up and they were able to leave the scene of the odd events. It is stated that their son lost his mind and was placed in a mental hospital ever since the event, which left him with a brown, dime-sized scar on his left ankle. He was 39 years of age in 1989.

The proliferation of UFO sightings over Thunder Bay, Red Rock and Nipigon Bay cluster around two focal points. The Ruby Lake Nordic base is situated ~5 miles (8 km) from the towns of Red Rock and Nipigon, whereas the city of Thunder Bay is ~10 miles (16 km) away from another subterranean base occupied by malevolent ET humanoids of different predatory species referred to as the Baal consortium.

A hidden underground base of the Baal predatory syndicate is located deep in the radioactive bedrock at Pie Island, which is 7.5 miles (12 km) in length, covering a thickly forested area of ~18 square miles (46 km<sup>2</sup>). An 850' circular plateau composed of dolerite dominates the island's west side, while immense rhomboidal dolerite bedrock formations rising high above the eastern and central areas of the island.

An underground UFO base of the Baal ET syndicate at Pie Island, in northern Lake Superior, Canada (48.2337924°N, 89.1604579°W, above), is located 5,908 miles from the Great Pyramid; representing 23.73% of Earth's mean circumference (<sup>19</sup>/<sub>80</sub>). This resonant distance reflects the value of Fibonacci #58 (5,912.86... x 10<sup>-8</sup>) in miles and Fibonacci #281 (23.77... x 10<sup>-58</sup>) in percent, conforming to the nonlinear mandala distribution pattern of Atlantean pyramids, temples and associated underground city complexes.

Persistent eyewitness accounts of silent aerial displays of luminous spacecraft in the vicinity of Thunder Bay have received recognition as a veritable UFO hotspot, featuring several reports of black boomerang-shaped spacecraft associated with UFO abductions by the small greys.<sup>11</sup> The remoteness of Pie Island provides concealment and protection for its subterranean inhabitants that include the sasquatch nocturnal sentinels.

The traditional placename 'Thunder Bay' is an Anglicized version of the original name inherited from the Ojibwe indigenous people, who called the bay and its settlement 'Animikie', meaning "thunder". This sacred name references blasts of booming infrasound resonance experienced by many generations at this location, constituting a nodal point of planetary resonance where ultra-low frequency standing waves converge. Another base of the nefarious Baal ET syndicate is found 293 miles (472 km) to the northwest.

Stefan Michalak, UFO burn victim
Falcon Lake, MB - May 20, 1967

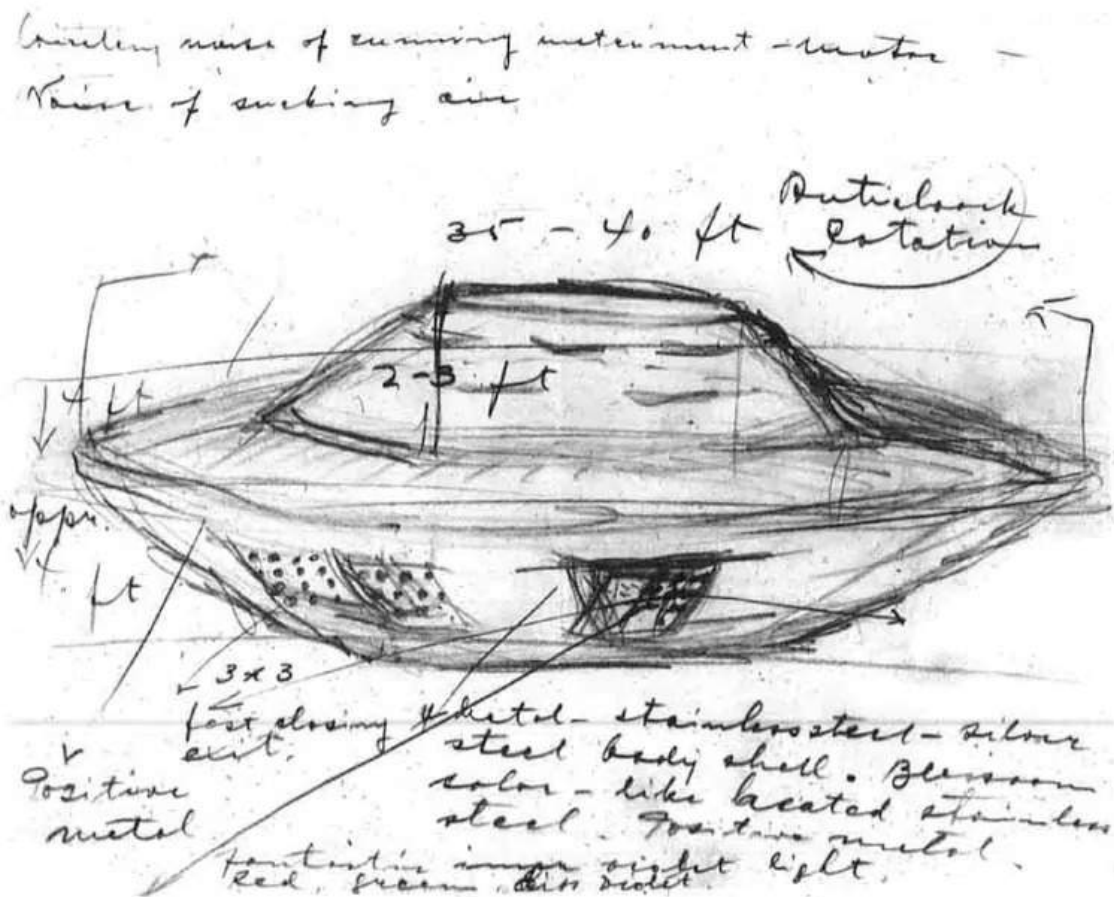

On May 20, 1967, Polish-Canadian mechanic and amateur prospector Stefan Michalak sustained serious injuries during a UFO encounter that took place near the Top of the World Lookout, south of Falcon Lake, Manitoba (49.7007396°N, 95.1938284°W). Stefan was hospitalized for treatment of serious chemical and thermal burns sustained during his brief interaction with a 23'-wide (7 m) metallic, disc-shaped spacecraft.<sup>12</sup>

undershirt, burn marks
S. Michalak - 1967

Stefan's son recounts: "At that point in time, the diagnosis –if you can call it that– was 'burns'... Heat caused burns. What they couldn't diagnose, and didn't have a clue about, was what appeared below the chest, on the abdomen. The exact same pattern of holes that was on a grid on the side of the craft –in the same order, in the same rows, in the same number– appeared as red spots on his lower abdomen..."

Stefan was released from the hospital, but he says his symptoms worsened. The nausea continued, and his body seems to emit a sulfuric stench. "There was this sulfur, ozone, electric motor stink about him. Its like he was carrying an aura of this smell wherever he walked, and you could smell this. Baths and showers couldn't take it out. That lasted for weeks. I remember seeing him in bed constantly; tired, nauseous, headachy, not feeling well, losing a lot of weight." Stefan made a detailed sketch of the craft:

Stefan Michalak was tested for radiation poisoning. The results were negative, yet no one could explain the source of the strange burns on this torso, which appeared to be an odd combination of microwave and chemical burns after being enveloped in a vapor cloud while being irradiated by laser beam weapons.

Such aggressive defense of the spacecraft was clearly unnecessary, given the passive attitude displayed by Michalak as he called out to the crafts occupants multiple times before slowly approaching the landed vehicle. Apparently, Stefan's exposure to the chemical and microwave-pulsed laser beam attacks were not fatal, as he was eventually able to rid himself of the putrid odor and heal his injuries. Several decades of scientific advancement confirm the vapor is an aerosolized mixture of ozone and sulfur dioxide gases:

The growth of aerosol due to the aqueous phase oxidation of sulfur dioxide by ozone was measured in laboratory-generated clouds created in the Cosmics Leaving OUtdoor Droplets (CLOUD) chamber at the European Organization for Nuclear Research (CERN). Experiments were performed at 10 and -10 °C, on acidic (sulfuric acid) and on partially to fully neutralised (ammonium sulfate) seed aerosol. Clouds were generated by performing an adiabatic expansion –pressurising the chamber to 220 hPa above atmospheric pressure, and then rapidly releasing the excess pressure, resulting in a cooling, condensation of water on the aerosol and a cloud lifetime of approximately 6 min.<sup>13</sup>

These recently published research details confirm the validity of eyewitness information given by Michalak so many decades ago, which exceeded the knowledge of modern scientists at that time. This new 2016 report specifies components given in the description of the noxious odor by Stefan's son, defining the acidic chemistry of non-lethal weaponry deployed against Stefan at close range to the craft.

Sulfur dioxide and ozone gases were heated by microwave beams while being rapidly mixed in the air, making direct contact with Stefan's shirt and skin. An instant chemical reaction between the agents causes rapid oxidation of the sulfur dioxide while being driven deep into the epidermis by microwave irradiation.

A piece of radioactive metal slag was later retrieved by Stefan from the UFO landing site (below). Testing of the sample has most likely not been conducted due to the reasonable fear of theft during transport, which quite often happens to such rare metallurgical specimens due to obsessive government monitoring.

The UFO witnessed by Stefan Michalak at Falcon Lake, Manitoba flew rapidly out of sight to the northeast to an underground base of the Baal ETs ~30 miles away. Gooseneck Rocks, overlooking Gooseneck Lake, Ontario (50.05452°N, 94.78712°W, opposite), is located 6,007 miles from the Great Pyramid; comprising 24.13% of Earth's mean circumference ( $\sim^{121}/_{500}$ ). This radial distance interval reflects the value of Fibonacci #259 (6,002.24... x 10<sup>-50</sup>) in miles and Fibonacci #482 (24.13... x 10<sup>-99</sup>) in percent, complementing the base's exact placement at 50° North latitude for maximizing infrasound standing wave reception.

Inclined lower sections of these imposing cliffs show all the characteristics of artificial dolerite refaçading, prepared for large mural paintings composed of anamorphic hieroglyph ligatures in red iron oxide pigments of the type seen at Chiribiquete, Colombia.<sup>14</sup> Paleo-Sanskrit murals covering the lower cliffs of Gooseneck Rocks were removed to conceal the underground complex. Atlantean Era megalithic stonework at this site was cast in geopolymer dolerite, manufactured from a caustic fluid mixture composed of pulverized dolerite particles, fine ferromagnetic and paramagnetic metal particles in an aqueous sodium-aluminosilicate blend.

The degree of difficulty in grasping the gargantuan scale of the cliff faces at Gooseneck Rocks, Manitoba is highlighted by the relative size of a rock climber making a slow ascent toward to its summit (above). The rock plateau high above offers spectacular southward views of Gooseneck Lake, where brightly glowing spacecraft have occasionally been observed emerging from and submerging into the lake waters.

The extremely low population density of the area ensures the secrecy of UFO beam abduction operations of the Baal ET consortium of various predatory humanoid species, allied for their many sinister purposes. The duality of dark and light, expressed in acts of both malevolence and benevolence, manifests in our cosmos in astounding ways that can only be recognized through the lens of hyperdimensional physics.

Conflating one light-skinned ET humanoid species with another can become problematic when dealing with multiple ET groups, each one furthering their own agenda by conducting transdimensional operations from a network of subterranean bases on various continents of Earth and embedded within various moons within our solar system and beyond. False information has been quietly disseminated by anonymous government sources to confuse public perception of specific physiological features of ancestral ET lines.

A poor quality version of this photograph first appeared in the early 2000s, labeled with information that purposely conflates different ET humanoid species, in addition to identifying an underground base of the tall white ETs at Mount Zeil, Australia. What was first purported to be an image of a tall white ET female is actually the Russian albino model Nastya Zhidkova (wearing white contact lenses) that more recently appeared at full resolution in an online article from Popular Mechanics in 2018.<sup>15</sup> The article, entitled “What Are Starseeds? - Humans Think They're Aliens Living on Earth”, blatantly disparages UFO experiencers.

The increasingly nonsensical offerings of mass media disinformation being promulgated throughout the echo-chamber of corporate news has steadily lost traction with a younger generation of highly intelligent individuals who possess an innate understanding of our Divine connection to the natural laws of Creation.

Despite decades of strategic diversions and repeated obfuscations of fundamental truths, intuitive seekers continue to reorient themselves according to an emerging awareness of hyperdimensional realities linked with progressive information from psychic channels, such as the Cassiopaea Transmissions of Laura Knight-Jadczyk and the compelling trance material of the early 20th century Sleeping Prophet Edgar Cayce.

Inspirational psychic readings published by high level Akashic sources such as these provide the crucial information bridge that grounds our expanding perceptions, as new cognitions stimulate our pursuit of newfound possibilities. By these special means, transdimensional aspects of reality that have previously remained hidden from the masses of humanity are now becoming more easily recognizable.

Scattered amid all the cluttered bits of disinformation are facets of genuine data that can be gleaned from the detritus. Mount Zeil is not only the name of a mountain peak, but also identifies the broader locality that includes an unnamed peak marking the site of the tall white ETs deep underground base. Their spacecraft transit directly through the colorful bedrock, composed of red quartzite, granite, siltstone and sandstone.

Alapa Pyramid in the Mount Zeil region of Northern Territory, Australia (23.2674152°S, 132.6436666°E, above) is located 7,659 miles from the Great Pyramid of present-day Giza, Egypt. This resonant distance interval corresponds to 30.77% of Earth's mean circumference ( $^{123}/_{400}$ ), reflecting the value of Fibonacci #293 (7,654.09... x 10<sup>-58</sup>) in miles and the value of Fibonacci #71 (30.80... x 10<sup>-13</sup>) in percent. These site features confirm efficient reception of focused infrasound resonance transduced by the Orion Pyramids.

'Alapa' is a Sanskrit word meaning "the singing or twittering of birds", referencing the native linguistic form of the tall white ET humanoids described by contactee Charles Hall as sounding similar to the jubilant songs of meadowlarks. Pertinent astronomical information on the home planet of the tall white ET humanoids was confirmed by stellar observations reported in 2022. Identified as exoplanet LP 890-9c (or by the designation SPECULOOS-2c), its size is 25.3 times larger than Earth, orbiting a small red dwarf star located at 28° South latitude in the Constellation of Eridanus, 'the River'.<sup>16</sup>

The tall white ETs' underground base below the ancient Alapa Pyramid Complex has been maintained under heavy surveillance by joint reconnaissance operations of the US, UK and Australian governments. Optimal temperature ranges preferred by the tall white ET humanoids correspond to the severe heat of the arid central region of the Australian continent and the deserts of central Nevada. Groups of tall white ETs can occasionally be seen enjoying brief forays to the surface during daylight hours and also at night.

Pine Gap underground installation, in Northern Territory, Australia (23.8012856°S, 133.736595°E, above), is situated 11 miles (~18 km) southwest of the town Alice Springs, where basic housing is provided for employees of the secretive black project site. Although official sources and documents identify functions of surface facilities visible at Pine Gap as relating to satellite surveillance, the truth is much more complex.

The Pine Gap deep underground military base is situated just 78 miles away to the southeast of the Mount Zeil UFO base of the tall white ETs, having been heavily utilized for space surveillance by the US, UK and Australian governments for many decades. Joint Space Defense Research Facility Pine Gap (SDRFPG) operations are conducted by Australian, British and American scientists working with the CIA, NSA and NRO, planning and coordinating defensive interceptions (of airborne missile threats and other satellite-based threats) using directed energy weapons (DEW) platforms. Covert functions of the deep installation include targeting ET spacecraft with advanced weapons systems including scalar radar and laser beams.

The series of large, white, spherical radomes seen at Pine Gap are used to target spacecraft overhead by emitting weaponized forms of high-amplitude radar as scalar wave pulses that strongly interfere with the proper operation of all advanced ET spacecraft, or deploying microwave-pulsed charged-particle laser beams. The precise orientation of X-band radar arrays, emitting in the 8-12 GHz range, is kept hidden by these radomes for the purpose of concealing the strategic direction of their lethal microwave emissions.

By focusing many arrays from various positions around the planet –in conjunction with the Gakona, Alaska HAARP station, the South Pole Station in Antarctica and several Sea-based X-band radar platforms<sup>17</sup> roaming the oceans– powerful earthquakes can be induced at any selected set of coordinates on Earth.

Reprehensible operations targeting tectonic faults for catastrophic quake induction, and the targeting of UFOs for technology theft by government crash recovery teams, have been partly exposed by former black project employees that include Eric Hecker, Phil Schneider, Derek Hennessy, Charles Hall, Bill Uhouse, Philip Corso, Clifford Stone, Wendelle Stevens and others. Their courageous revelations have expanded the collective consciousness of humanity, now ascending in synchrony with ET visitors from other worlds.
